The Longest Day
The Lioness Mothers
Our Sun a Cannon
Apathetic Citizens

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1926, Star Publishing Co.

AFTER midnight this morning Spring ended, Summer began, the sun began his longest day of the year. Many of us, much interested in a day that has most daylight and another one that has least daylight, pay little attention to the hours and their opportunities generally.

THIS WILL INTEREST all mothers and some fathers. Sir James Bland Sutton, great British surgeon, and vice-president of the Zoological Society, interested himself in lionesses that had a terrible time when their babies were born.

"I suggested feeding them with cod liver oil and bone dust," said the great surgeon. "Now they have healthy whelps, and easier parturition." Vitamins and lime did it.

Perhaps experiments on lionesses will eventually prove useful to human mothers. Dieting, if we understood it, might simplify child birth, and reduce the mortality that accompanies it.

PROFESSOR SNYDER of the Philadelphia Observatory says the earth was shot into space by our sun, a sort of cosmic cannon.

All "rotating suns," says he, thus shoot out planets and build up solar systems.

IT SEEMS frightfully gigantic to us, but a hen laying an egg would seem just as impressive to a microbe.

It seems reasonable that suns,

PICK GENE TUNNEY TO FIGHT DEMPSEY, SEPT. 16

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—Tex Rickard informed the New York Athletic Commission today that he had selected Gene Tunney to fight Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight championship at Yankee Stadium on September 16 and offered to post $50,000 that the winner would meet Harry Wills. Action on Rickard's proposal was deferred by the board.

Rickard told the commission that under no circumstances would he promote a Dempsey-Wills fight this year. He said he had made ironclad contracts with Tunney and the champion and already had advanced both fighters money.

If the commission declined to approve the Dempsey-Wills match as a Yankee Stadium fight, Rickard said he would take the contest "elsewhere."

This was accepted as indicating that their refusal to sanction the match would force the promoter to transfer the bout to his Jersey City arena, Boyle's Thirty Acres.

GAVE COPS COAT FOR FAVORS

Testifying under cross-examination in his trial for giving gratuities to policemen, Attorney Nathan Ullian in Suffolk Superior Court today admitted he gave $25 to Officer John Cullinan for a "topcoat," after a liquor case of the lawyer's had been disposed of.

Ullian testified he made gifts to two other policemen involved in the "rap" cases, but said he "meant no wrong," that they had favored him.

Ullian said "topcoat" was merely a figure of speech to cover a request for a financial gift, but denied that it had any connection with the case of John Nelson, the lawyer's client, who was fined $100.

The defendant also admitted he had been given two gallons of wine by Sergeant William D. Walsh of Division 9, but contended that Assistant District Attorney George Alpert had received champagne from the same officer.

POLITICAL REASON.

Ullian further declared that Alpert had told him the district attorney must convict "these cops," or he would not be re-elected.

"You have got to give me information," the witness quoted the assistant district attorney as saying.

Boston Prelate Lauds Catholic Women for Their 'Sublime Deeds

Chicago, June 22.—Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, who today presided at the Eucharistic "Women's Day" meeting on Soldiers Field, paid a glowing tribute to the Catholic women of the world. In a speech prepared for delivery he said:

"What mortal tongue has words to pay tribute to the brilliancy of the faith and the ardor of the charity which this majestic meeting embodies and expresses? With profound humility and with intense gratitude we accept the holy privilege of membership in this congress of nations, called to honor God, truly present in the most blessed Sacrament of the Eucharist.

"We are come to this thriving American metropolis, known everywhere for the industry and energy of its citizens and for the rapidity and magnitude of its growth, to proclaim our firm belief in the divine source of true life in this world, Jesus Christ in the holy sacrament of the altar.

4 'WIVES' FIGHT 'COUNT' MONTE

While "Count Paul Anatole Monte," which some claim is a nickname for just plain Nicholas Wiseman, was shouting "Frame-up" today in Charles Street Jail, one of his four alleged wives arrived in Boston to begin action for non-support.

At the same time, the Federal District Attorney received from Montreal a deposition from the woman declared to be Monte's mother—Mrs. Rose Wiseman—and in the deposition it is admitted that Monte has more than one wife.

The deposition also purported to reveal that the dapper Romeo now a guest of Sheriff Kelliher came by his title of "Count Paul Anatole De Montefiore," to give it in full, simply through his own imagination.

To give his claim to noble blood a touch of authenticity, he wheedled his Ma into signing thirteen of his letters "Mme. La Comtesse Rose De Montefiore," the deposition declares.

Mrs. Michael Boccardy of Auburn, Me., was the indignant "spouse" who arrived in the Hub to take up the cudgels against Monte, and because she has no means she sought help of the Legal Aid Society to prosecute him for non-support.

NUNS FAINT AS 500,000 JAM GATES OF FIELD AT CATHOLIC CONGRESS

Chicago, June 22.—Scores of persons were injured, ten nuns and twenty other women fainted, and police were forced to climb the fence to save themselves, when a tremendous throng rushed the gates at the north end of Soldiers' Field just before the mass started at the Eucharistic Congress today.

When the mass began nearly 200,000 persons were packed into the field and a crowd estimated at more than 500,000 was gathered in Grant Park, adjacent.

A broiling sun beat down on the huge concourse, with almost a total absence of breeze to relieve the suffering.

A tremendous mob started to rush the gates at the north end of the field, shoving forward with irresistible force. Ten nuns fainted in the crush, and many other women collapsed.

At least two of the big Boston cigar manufacturers are still having their cigars made in New York and Pennsylvania by non-union labor.

The Elcho Cigar is being made in Boston by Union men as it always has been.

Union labor must stand by its friends. Not only should we buy Elcho Cigars because of the consistent stand of the Elcho Cigar Co. for union principles, but because of their insistence in employing local labor all the time.

Respectfully yours.

THOUSANDS OF NUNS SING AT MASS FOR WOMEN

Women and children were crushed in the ranks of the closely packed worshippers, some of them sustaining injuries.

A cordon of police, futilely attempting to stem the tide of surging humanity, were forced back against the fence, and to avoid injury to themselves were finally obliged to scale the structure.

At the Eighth street bridge, leading to the field, more than sixty women fainted in a period of one and one-half hours, and similar scenes, although of less magnitude, occurred at all other viaducts near the stadium.

Today was women's day at the Congress.

By the thousands they trooped to the field to take part in the greatest religious gathering America ever has know.

Young girls, mothers with babes in their arms, stooped grandmothers, all went with one purpose—the adoration of the Holy Eucharist as the emplification of the body and blood of Christ.

The presiding dignitary of the day was Cardinal O'Connell of Boston.

It was the greatest gathering of women ever assembled within one enclosure in America. There were at least 175,000 members of the sex in attendance. Scattered among them were 5,000 men, most of whom had been unable to crowd into the field on the opening day.

A chorus of 15,000 voices, including 6,000 nuns, chanted the muss for the mass said on the huge, magnificent altar erected on the field for the congress.

Thousands of women began marching toward the stadium as early as 7 o'clock. The throngs overflowed the stands and pressed into the space reserved for the clergy and choir in the great carpeted field.

Clear, sunny skies greeted the throng when Cardinal O'Connell arrived and called the vast assemblage to order.

In a speech prepared for delivery and released for publication he lauded the Catholic women of the world for their religious devotion down through the ages and their great sacrifices in behalf of mankind and the church. He added:

"In all the impressive and beautiful manifestations of charity, heroism and sublime self denial in the world the women of the Catholic Church have given powerful and brilliant examples."

In reference to the "divine bounty" enjoyed by the people of the United States, the Cardinal said:

"Nowhere in the world has God laid at the feet of His people more of nature's resources in support of the body's needs. Our thankfulness is thus of necessity supreme."

Solemn pontifical high mass was celebrated by the Most Reverend Paul Giobbe, Apostolic Nuncio from Colombia to the United States. The most Rev. Edward J. Hanna, Archbishop of San Francisco, preached the sermon. Addresses also were made by Cardinals Charost of France and Piffl of Austria.

But the crowning feature of the great spectacle was the response to the mass sung by thousands of nuns, women who have sacrificed their lives to the cause of Christianity; to the relief of human ills; mental and physical.

For weeks, and in some instances months, these holy women had rehearsed for their share in today's spectacle, and their offering today marked a high spot in the lives of most of them. It was a spectacle the like of which Chicago, and probably no other place in America, has never seen before.

Associate Justice Butler of the Supreme Court of the United States, one of the speakers of the day, received an enthusiastic ovation. He emphasized the importance of religious training as a factor in the moral development of democratic institutions. He said religion and morality were the rocks upon which were reared the whole fabric of the democratic social structure.

He warned against "destructive excesses" in attempts to legislate for all of the "purely personal trials and burdens of life."

Touching upon foreign relations he said:

"Isolation is impossible."

Today's demonstration followed the gigantic gathering at Soldiers Field yesterday, when 62,000 Chicago school children sang the "Mass of the Angels," and a dinner last night at the Blackstone Hotel given by the Knights of St. Gregory for visiting church dignitaries and distinguished laymen.

Speakers at the dinner included Gov. Al Smith of New York, former U. S. Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, James J. Guerin, member of the Canadian Parliament; and former Judge Morgan J. O'Brien of New York.

Governor Smith, in his talk, emphasized the absence of bigotry in the reception to America of visiting foreign pilgrims to the Congress and declared the Eucharistic Congress is proving a great contribution to the peace and security of the world.

All World Answers Call of the Church

Chicago, June 22.—Cardinal Mundelein, sponsor of the Congress, says of the holding of the ceremonies in Chicago: "As the youngest daughter of the great Catholic family, with all the enthusiasm and energy of youth, we sent forth the call to the children of the Holy Church the world over. And, behold, they have answered our call, and from every land under the sun they have come—the greatest and the poorest."

The spectacle of the Mass of the Angels at Soldiers Field, when a quarter of a million people thronged to make the occasion the greatest gathering ever assembled for a Christian religious ceremony, recalled some of the famous ecclesiastical gatherings of history. Pomp and ceremony those occasions had, but their assemblies would have been virtually lost in the throng before which Cardinal Bonzano celebrated mass.

* * *

Four hundred kiddies were "found" during the ceremonies, and all but twenty knew their home addresses. Special workers were kept busy reuniting families.

From daylight until dark yesterday thousands filed through the Holy Name Cathedral for a glimpse of the interior and to receive benediction. It was estimated that 5,000 an hour entered the church.

Governor Smith Guest of Leading Chicago Citizens

Chicago, June 22 (I.N.S.).—One hundred prominent Chicagoans, leaders in industry, trade and politics, today were guests at the Chicago Club at a luncheon given by George F. Getz, Chicago coal operator, for Gov. A. Smith of New York. The guests included Mayor Dever, former Mayor William Hale Thompson and George E. Brennan, Democratic nominee for United States Senator from Illinois. Following the luncheon Governor Smith was taken for a drive about the city. He will leave tonight for Albany in response to a message saying that his presence was needed in connection with pressing legislative matters. He was here to attend the Eucharistic Congress.

'TOLERANCE' IS KEYNOTE OF LAYMEN

Chicago, June 22 (A.P.).—Tolerance, the spirit of religious freedom and benefit for all creeds are seen by prominent Catholic laymen in the magnificent ceremonies of the Eucharistic Congress which have attracted to the young city by the inland sea the greatest gathering ever assembled for a Christian religious ceremony.

Governor Al Smith of New York and Mayor William E. Dever of Chicago, former Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts and other lay Catholics stressed the note of tolerance in addresses before a gathering of the English speaking Knights of St. Gregory last night. The meeting closed a day of impressive pageantry and ceremony, the central event of which was the open air celebration of the Mass of Angels in the Municipal Stadium, which attracted nearly 400,000 pilgrims.

GENERAL MEETING.

Six of the twelve princes of the church here for the ceremonies had leading parts on today's program, which included a general meeting of the congress at Soldiers' Field with Cardinal O'Connell of Boston presiding, and addresses by Cardinals Charost, archbishop of Rennes, France, and Piffl, archbishop of Vienna, and by Justice Pierce Butler of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"The glorious reception of the cardinals in New York, the acclaim with which they traversed the State on their way here places New York in the forefront of the States prepared to deny there is any spirit of bigotry in America," said Governor Smith before the Knights of St. Gregory.

The Empire State executive saw the congress as a great "influence for good among men, for good to our land and the whole world."

NOTHING BUT GOOD.

Mayor Dever said that "nothing but good for all creeds can come from this gathering," and he declared the event has given him a "higher degree of hope for the destiny of America" than anything that had ever gone before.

The congress moved into a new day of activity still remembering vividly the Mass of the Angels in the great open air cathedral in Grant Park.

At the outer gate of Chicago the church set up her temple, its roof the gray sky, low hung with scudding clouds, driven lakeward by a westerly wind and bringing once a few drops of rain. Its sheltering walls were the gray stone cliffs of the doric stadium and its heart the altar on which Cardinal Bonzano, the Papal Legate, celebrated mass before the greatest throng of devotees gathered for the sacrament of communion.

Historeographers of the church declared that nothing comparable to the devotional outpuring is recorded in the annals of Catholicism.

Chicago, June 21 (Universal).—Four hundred newspapermen are writing 500,000 words each day on the activities of the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress in session here this week, it was estimated today.

Foreign press services and the larger dailies of every continent are "covering" the Congress, headquarters announced.

ATTY. ULLIAN ADMITS HE MADE GIFTS TO POLICE

'O'Brien has got to convict these cops because if he doesn't he won't be elected.'"

Under direct examination by Atty. William Flaherty, the defendant, the first to go on trial in the so-called take-the-rap cases, declared his clients received no more favors than other litigants or defendants in Roxbury court.

FAVORS FROM POLICEMEN.

Ullian said the only favors he got from policemen were continuances and their agreement not to arrest his clients but allow him to surrender them in court. He said of the 75 cases he had handled in Roxbury court, 98 per cent. were disposed of by pleas of guilty.

Ullian was the first witness in his own defence in the so-called take-the-rap cases, the government having completed its case with the reading of his testimony before the Grand Jury, together with a statement made to Assistant District Attorney George Alpert.

Questioned by Attorney Flaherty, the witness said he was thirty-four years old and had been a member of the bar for thirteen years, with an office at No. 18 Tremont street. He said his cases in Roxbury Court averaged one a week, beginning in 1922, and not 1918, as charged. Most of the cases were prosecuted by Station 9, so that Ullian said he came in frequent contact with Sergeant William D. Walsh and Officer Cullinan and O'Shea.

The witness said he knew the patrolman better, as they were in his district and took part in many raids. Ullian told of clients coming to his office and said:

"In a great many instances clients kept facts away from me. For instance, if in a raid the police seized ten gallons, the client would say it was three gallons.

"After getting the facts from both sides it would enable me to determine whether to try the case or offer a plea."

Ullian said that in most instances the liquor cases were continued the first time to await the report of analysis.

DENIES "FIXING" ANYONE.

The witness admitted that the statements read in court were in the most part correct, but said he was not given an opportunity to explain. He denied ever saying to a government witness that he had to "fix" anyone or "split" money with anyone.

"Of course not," he said. "Certainly no."

"Did you ever give Officers Cullinan and O'Shea any money," he was asked by Flaherty.

A.—I couldn't say I gave them money.

Attorney Flaherty: Don't quibble. I want nothing but the facts.

Q.—How much money in all did you give them. A.—Perhaps in 4 years in dribs and drabs, not more than $100 between the two.

CHIDES ALUMNI ON ATHLETICS

"Few students discover what education really is until their college careers are almost ended.

"With all their differences the young savage and the Harvard student are trying to do exactly the same thing: each is acquiring a sort of knowledge for use."

These were observations made today by Edward C. Aswell of Nashville, Tenn., in his class oration at the Sanders Theatre, where exercises were held as a feature of the annual class day.

Old grads came back with their women folk to meet the gang once more, but the oldsters were but part of the program that was centred around the graduating class.

SENIORS IN PARADE.

Attending services in Appleton Chapel with Dr. Charles E. Park directing, to begin the day, the seniors then formed at Holworthy Hall and marched behind a band to Sanders Theatre, where they were massed on the stage with the overflow in the front part of the orchestra.

Here the class oration was first delivered. Then came reading of the class poem, "The Tragical History of Mr. Loftus," by Charles A. Smart of Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y., and reading and singing of the class ode by Almon G. Cooke of New York.

In the afternoon Henry A. Bull, delivered the oration at tree exercises and Elmer J. Bliss, Jr., of Boston, the ivy oration.

FESTIVITIES IN YARD.

Tonight the college yard will be illuminated, the glee club will sing and the seniors, who receive their degrees on Thursday, will dance.

"Throughout the rest of our lives we shall consider it our prerogative to criticize the policies of the university," said Class Orator Aswell in the theatre exercises.

"Certainly our criticism can do no good if we fall into the error to which alumni seem to be subject—of thinking that the supreme object of the college is to win athletic victories."

BOBBED HAIR PASSE, SAY ALPHA PHI GIRLS

Bobbed hair was classed as passe at the convention of the Alpha Phi Fraternity, now on the second of its five-day sessions at the New Ocean House in Swampscott.

About 400 girls from all over the United States are attending the conference. As a matter of actual record it was found that 85 per cent. of them had bobbed their hair when it was considered fashionable.

Now 60 per cent. are letting their locks lengthen again. One miss declared that it was about time to return to the beauty and dignity of grandmother.

The prevalent style of coiffure is the Psyche knot at the nape of the neck, with the hair smoothly drawn about the head.

President Charlotte Lowe Kittleman, one of the original members of the fraternity, was the presiding officer at all the sessions today.

DEATH STALKS JAY-WALKERS

Of the 516 persons killed in the State in automobile accidents during the past year, 148 were either killed or fatally injured at Boston street crossings, a letter from the engineering department of the Liberty Mutual Insurance Company informed Superintendent of Police Crowley today.

Jay-walking and disregard for traffic signals are blamed for the street fatalities. The figures were compiled in a survey made by engineers of the insurance company. David S. Beyer, vice-president of the company and head of the engineering department, is the author of the letter. He suggests police take the names of jay-walkers caught in the act of disobeying traffic signals or crossing a street at a point other than a crossing.

ASK GOVERNOR TO SAVE SLAYER

Five hundred petitions were circulated today by parents, counsel and friends of Edward J. Heinlein, one of the three convicted Waltham carbarn slayers condemned to die during the week of August 8.

The petitions, addressed to Governor Fuller, ask commutation of sentence to life imprisonment for Heinlein on the ground he was not present when James Ferneau, watchman at the carbarn, was murdered and had no hand in it.

Many individuals and organizations are back of the movement to save Heinlein from the electric chair, and some of the first women to put their names to the petitions today included: Mrs. Charles T. Clark, formerly of Worcester, vice-president of the Massachusetts Democratic Women's Club; Mrs. Edward L. Cauley, president of the Bay State Democratic Women's Club; Mrs. Annie Brinloff, Miss Elizabeth Ring, Mrs. Henry Maginnis, chief ranger of St. Genevieve's Court, M. C. O. F.; Mrs. Barbara Fall and Mrs. Etta McKenney.

The petition to the Governor reads:

"We the undersigned, residents of Massachusetts, respectfully and earnestly petition Your Excellency to commute the death sentence imposed upon Edward J. Heinlein to life imprisonment in the State Prison, and assign as reasons therefor the following:

"Edward J. Heinlein did not, with his own hands, kill or assist in the killing of James Ferneau.

"Edward J. Heinlein specifically requested his associates to do no hurt to anyone on the premises of the carbarns on the night of the alleged murder.

"Edward J. Heinlein never saw the victim or never knew of his being shot until long after the incident had occurred.

"The death penalty in this case would be extreme, and the ends of justice would be met and satisfied by imprisonment in the State Prison for life."

"Yellow Kid" Gets 5 Years

Chicago, June 22 (I.N.S.).—Joseph R. "Yellow Kid" Weil today was sentenced to five years in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth for having in his possession government stamps and railway bonds, stolen in the East Chicago, Ind., and the Roundout, Ill., mail robberies.

Chinese Premier Resigns

Peking, June 22 (A.P.).—Dr. W. W. Yen, premier of the Peking government which was formed on May 13, has resigned. Admiral Tu Hsikwei, minister of the navy, has been appointed premier pro tem.

SAVE CHILDREN IN TREE CRASH

Saved by the shouts of two workmen, 25 schoolchildren narrowly escaped serious injury at the corner of 7 and West Fifth streets, South Boston, when a large elm tree crashed to the ground, tearing down several telephone wires.

George Connors of Broadway and James Fleming of Silver street were going home to lunch when they heard the tree cracking. Youngsters from the Clinch and Shurtleff schools were playing nearby.

The men yelled and the children scattered as the tree broke eight feet above the base and toppled across F street. Several telephone wires passing through its boughs were carried with it. A strong wind is thought to have caused the break.

TRUCK TIES UP 'L' TRAFFIC

Many citybound workers from Roxbury and Dorchester were forced to walk today when a disabled motor truck tied up inbound traffic on the Fields Corner-Dudley street line of the Boston Elevated in Dudley street, Roxbury, near the Home for the Aged. A broken front wheel on the truck caused the tieup.

When the line became congested, traffic was diverted through Massachusetts avenue to Northampton street. The truck was owned by an auto accessory concern.

PONTOON GEAR BREAK DELAYS RAISING OF S51

New London, June 22 (A.P.).—With the bow of the S-51 off the bottom, but the stern still on it, securing gear on a pair of pontoons gave way today, again delaying raising the submarine, which was sunk last September by the steamer City of Rome, fourteen miles off Block Island.

'HELL FURY' LOOSED BY SCORNED WOMAN

Atlantic City, N. J., June 22 (I.N.S.).—Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry K. Thaw, today commented on a story told in New York in which she was quoted as saying Thaw killed Stanford White, the famous architect, over a prominent actress—and not over her.

For more than a decade, ever since the shooting, White's attentions to Evelyn Nesbit were generally accepted as the motive for the slaying.

Recalling the tragedy and events preceding it, Evelyn said today:

"Harry was paying attention to an actress. She was a very good friend of mine. In 1901, before Harry met me, he was very attentive to her.

"One day he took her to Tiffany's and bought a very beautiful ring with four diamonds and a ruby. This was before he knew me.

THAW CUT HER COLD.

"She told us all about it, and told me that Harry was going to take her to Europe. She said that, anticipating the trip to Europe, Harry arranged a supper at Sherry's. Two days previous to the supper party, at which she was to have been the guest of honor, Harry was dining in Sherry's with people who were well-known.

"She came into Sherry's with the editor of a society paper. Harry was with a man and woman who were prominent socially. For some peculiar reason never made known to me, Harry ignored her. The only way that we could afterwards analyze his slight of her was that Thaw didn't want the people he was with to know that he knew a chorus girl.

"She told me later that for some reason Thaw cut her dead. That was just like Harry. If he was with people socially promient he would ignore people whom he thought were not up to their social station in life. She got even with him.

"Two days later Thaw was to entertain her. There were to have been twenty in the party and she was to have been the guest of honor. Thaw was going to announce his trip to Europe. She saw a chance to get even.

"She got in touch with Harry on the afternoon of the supper and told him to have all of his friends there, and not to forget to have tables reserved for twenty guests.

"Harry showed up with his male friends and she coolly rang up Stanford White at Madison Square Garden tower and she, with friends, had supper at Stanford White's studio in the tower with Stanford White and a number of his male friends—the party numbering about ten couples.

"In the meantime Thaw and his friends were cooling their heels at the bar in Sherry's, and the girls never showed up.

THAW BLAMED WHITE.

"Thaw was furious when he learned of it. His big party had gone to smash. I have been told that Harry flew into a rage."

Miss Nesbit said Thaw got over his anger after a day or two and called up the girl. But, Miss Nesbit said, the girl never got over the insult. She refused to talk to Thaw over the telephone and hung up the receiver.

"Harry tried on various occasions to make up with her, but she would have nothing to do with him," Miss Nesbit said. "Harry seemed to think Stanford White was responsible for the breaking up of his party."

NEAR DEATH AS CAR CRASHES WALL

DRIVER LOSES CONTROL

Miss Elizabeth L. Blood, No. 101 Beacon street, Brookline, who is near death in the Milton Hospital as the result of injuries suffered when Altheuf Adams lost control of an auto, which crashed into a stone wall. Adams also was hurt seriously.

HUB AFTER 1927 CONVENTION

A determined effort will be made to bring to Boston the 1927 convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, it was voted by the New England branch of that organization at its final quarterly luncheon at Jordan Marsh Company's annex today.

It was further announced that a drive for members would begin immediately and the hope was expressed that at least 500 would be added before the next meeting.

A window display school for employes of members will be opened soon at which expert instructors will teach modern methods of window adornment for retail stores, it was announced. The meeting adjourned, following a report by President J. R. Graham and Secretary F. L. Spellman of the recent Chicago conference of presidents and vice-presidents of the national body.

LYNN BOY DIES IN FLAX POND

Roland Back, two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Back of No. 481 Chestnut street, was drowned in Flax pond, Lynn, today while his terrified playmates looked on. Charles H. Burkes, proprietor of a boathouse on the pond, recovered the body and with police officers worked over it an hour without success. The boy's mother was overcome with grief by the tragedy.

SOCIETY RACING WOMAN CREMATED FIXING HAIR

Newmarket, Eng., June 22 (A.P.).—Mrs. Huntley Walker, widely known society woman and race-horse owner, was burned to death at her home here today when her hair caught fire as she was dressing it. Among the horses Mrs. Walker owned was Hidennis, winner of the Chester Cup this year. Mrs. Walker owned the Villa Del Sol at San Remo, one of the most beautiful on the Italian Riviera.

2 FATALLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Miss Elizabeth L. Blood, of No. 101 Beacon street, Brookline, and Altheuf Adams, No. 177 Milk street, Boston, were injured, probably fatally, today when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a stone wall and overturned in Milton.

The couple were picked up unconscious and taken to the Milton Hospital, where it was found the girl was suffering from a fractured skull and her name was placed on the danger list.

Adams was suffering from contusions and abrasions and possible internal injuries, and a consultation of physicians will be held today over his case.

As far as the police could learn, the couple were returning home in a coupe, when on Centre street Adams apparently lost control and the car shot across the road. It struck a stone wall and overturned, throwing out the two occupants. A passing motorist notified the police and the victims were taken to the hospital in the police ambulance.

Miss Blood, whose family is said to reside in Groton, has been supervisor of domestic science at the Malden schools for several years, according to her landlady.

Adams, also a graduate of Amherst, was said to live at Northboro, but roomed at No. 869 Beacon street, Brookline. He is in the grain business.

GIVES CLERK BLANK PAPER FOR $15 CASH

Using an envelope game, an unidentified man today, duped a clerk at the Newton Bakery Company, Newton Corner, out of $15. The man after making a small purchase asked the clerk, Mary Burke of Boyd street, Newton, for a $10 and $5 bill for fifteen $1 bills. She gave him the money which he placed in an envelope. He then fumbled in his pockets and found he had only fourteen $1 bills.

Handing the clerk an envelope, supposedly the one in which he had placed the larger bills, he left the store saying he was going out to get the other dollar from his wife.

When he did not return, the clerk opened the envelope and found it contained only blank paper.

If losing Appetite for Breakfast

BECAUSE it is totally and wholly different from any other cereal you have ever tasted, Puffed Rice tastes good when nothing else does.

It's finest rice steam exploded to 8 times its natural size, then deliciously oven crisped so that it melts like butter in your mouth. Its flavor is like toasted nutmeats, only richer.

SNEAK THIEF LOOTS 2 TEACHERS' PURSES

As unidentified man in the Prescott School in East Somerville today sneaked to the teachers' dressing room and plundered the hand bags of two teachers for about $31 and railroad tickets. Mrs. Myrtle I. Martin and Miss G. Hortense Pentecost, fith grade instructors, were the victims. Mrs. Martin lost $28. Miss Pentecost had about $3 and a strip of railroad tickets in her purse. This is the third of a series of petty larcenies in Somerville schools in three months.

VISITING TRAFFIC CLUBS TO BE SHOWN HARBOR

The Maritime Association of the Chamber of Commerce will entertain 250 members of the traffic clubs of Springfield and Worcester and officially escort them around the harbor next Tuesday. The party will be personally received by Rear Admiral Philip H. Andrews and taken aboard the U. S. S. Constitution. Notables to be present are Senator William M. Butler, Governor Alvan T. Fuller, Channing Cox, Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols and W. W. Lufkin.

50 TO 60 'DANGEROUS AGE' FOR U. S. HUSBANDS

Jersey City, June 22 (A.P.).—The "dangerous age" for husbands today was fixed at the period between fifty and sixty years by Vice-Chancellor Lewis, who denied a divorce to Walter L. Clarkson, city engineer of Bayonne, from Sarah L. Clarkson. Lewis said:

"I am satisfied that this husband became enamored of a much younger woman. That is so often the case of men of advancing years."

"Then their fervor for the woman who once was the whole world to them cools and they begin to search for a younger female than the aging woman of their youthful choice.

"They realize they are nearing the end of their allotted 'three score and ten', and, I suppose, are possessed by an impulse to enjoy a last wild fling at adventure while there still is time."

TRACING WOMAN BY BABY'S LAUNDRY MARK

Identity of the woman who hurled a black traveling bag containing the body of a six-weeks'-old baby boy into the Charles River was being traced today through a laundry mark found on the clothing of the dead infant.

Sergeant John Manning of Station No. 3 is checking up all laundries in the city. A cloth tag bearing a mark, "1-4," was attached to the child's undergarment.

THURINGIA IN PORT AFTER ROUGH PASSAGE

The steamer Thuringia of the Hamburg-American line arrived today at Commonwealth Pier, 24 hours late, after a rough voyage.

The vessel carried 17 cabin and the same number of third-class passengers for this port, including Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hess, Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Butler with their daughter, Anetta, and son, Charles, Carl Linke, Mrs. Marcia Terlinden and daughters, Paula, Louise and Christine.

LOST CARFARE HALTS WEDDING

Gardner, June 22 (A.P.).—Miss Anita Desmarais of this city is today undecided whether she will go through with plans for her wedding to Arthur Meur of West Allis, Wis.

The wedding was to have taken place today and, according to Miss Desmarais, her intended husband was on his way here, but when he reached Chicago wired her he had lost his fare and would be indefinitely delayed.

Miss Desmarais met her intended husband through a mail introduction after joining a Florida social club. After an exchange of pictures and correspondence she says Meur asked her to marry him and she accepted. Meur sent word he was on his way here and all preparations for the wedding were completed. Then came the telegram.

DRY PARTY WILL BE REVIVED IN NEW YORK

New York, June 22 (A.P.).—A movement to revive the prohibition party in every State in the union will be launched Thursday, when the party holds a State convention to place a complete State ticket in the field for the elections this Fall, according to D. Leigh Colvin, national chairman of the party.

GOV. BREWSTER RENOMINATED

Portland, Me., June 22 (A.P.).—Governor Ralph O. Brewster has been renominated by Maine Republicans, leading his opponent, Major Arthur L. Thayer of Bangor, from the first returns of yesterday's primary. He increased his margin as the late figures from the cities came in until today it had reached 14,430 from 506 precincts out of 633 in the State.

These precincts gave Brewster 43,251, Thayer 28,821. They included all the cities except Rockland and two precincts of Portland.

Congressman Ira G. Hersey, Republican, was renominated for a sixth term in the Fourth District by a wide margin. Congressman Carroll L. Deedy, Wallace H. White, Jr., and John E. Nelson, all Republicans, were renominated without opposition.

The Democratic nominees are: For Governor, Ernest L. McLean, Mayor of Augusta; for Congress, Richard E. Hersom of Lebanon, Charles M. Starbird of Auburn, Edward Chase of Baring and Frank A. Peabody of Houlton.

State Auditor Elbert D. Hayford, Republican, won a renomination over Edwin J. Morrill of South Portland.

Thayer won support from those dissatisfied over the methods used in the ousting by the Governor of Sheriff Henry F. Cummings of Kennebec County on charges of maladministration of the county jail. Sheriff Cummings on incomplete returns appeared to have been renominated over Ira A. Witham of Clinton.

MRS. MORROW MADE TRUSTEE AT SMITH

Northampton, June 22 (A.P.).—Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow of New York city was elected to the board of trustees of Smith College today. She succeeds Mrs. Ruth Standish of Springfield, who retired. No member of the board serves more than ten years.

Mrs. Kendall Emerson of Worcester was named to the alumnae trusteeship vacated by Mrs. Morrow upon her election. Mrs. Emerson was graduated from Smith in 1897 as Josephine Sewall and had been president of the Alumnae Association since 1923.

"RECKLESS DRIVING" KILLED STOUGHTON MEN

Negligence and reckless driving by Edward Connor of Stoughton caused the deaths of Thomas J. McCormick and Richard J. Kelleher of the same town in a Stoughton auto accident Judge Marden reported as his inquest finding today in Dedham Court.

No recommendation was made by Judge Marden in connection with the finding.

Connor was the driver of a machine that climbed the sidewalk in Park street, Stoughton, on the night of last April 13, and struck McCormick and Kelleher.

MANY FLEE FOR LIVES AS STONE CEILING FALLS

Central Falls, R. I., June 22.—With a roar that sent residents of the neighborhood rushing from their homes, the ceiling in the electrical store of E. J. Desormeaux, No. 454 Dexter street, collapsed today, pulled down by the weight of a ton of electrical fixtures. Desormeaux was in the store at the time, but escaped injury. The roar sounded like the reverberation of an explosion. The loss will reach several thousand dollars.

COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS BY BETTY ALDEN

Mrs. Larz Anderson Throws Open Her Estate, "Weld", to Assist Disabled Ex-Service Men's Exchange

A PRETTY LITTLE STORY of Mrs. Larz Anderson's characteristic generosity hangs on tomorrow's opening to the public of her beautiful estate, "Weld," in Brookline. She takes this opportunity to assist that notable organization, the Disabled Ex-Service Men's Exchange.

MRS. ANDERSON provides a band to play in the upper gardens, and the refreshments to be sold during the day are also her generous contribution to the good cause.

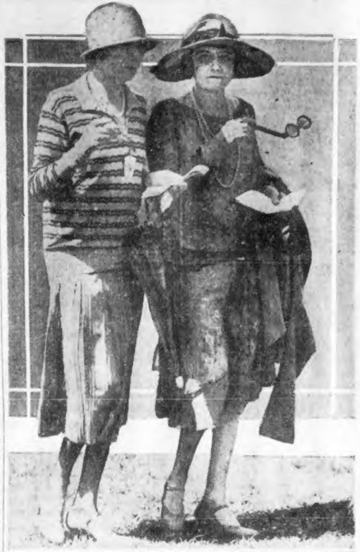
SET OUT, probably on the upper terrace, there'll be a rich array of articles from the exchange to be sold—a plentiful supply such as delighted patrons at Atlantic City recently and returned nearly $1,500 to the exchange for its disabled.

MRS. CLARENCE RANSOM EDWARDS (just back from a flying trip to upper New York State), Mrs. Edward Mauran Beals, Mrs. William F. Law and Mrs. Charles Royce Butler, never-failing in their enthusiasm for the exchange, will assume various duties for the sale.

MRS. ANDERSON, by the way, is bringing out another book, the latest work of her pen having to do, I believe, with her beloved France and is reminiscent of her own heroic service overseas with the Allies.

OF ALL Mrs. Anderson's interests none claims more intense devotion than her literary work. With her writing is indeed a labor of love, for every penny resulting from the sale of her books goes to one or another of her countless charities.

THE WEDDING down in lovely little Nahant of Miss Madeleine Beals and John Howard Fay (the bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Edward Mauran Beals aforementioned) on July 17 will be a notable occasion. It is to be at the Nahant church.



MRS. A. A. FOWLER MRS. F. L. AMES
Sisters, both prominent socially, met at the Country Club races.

SOCIETY IN SMART array filled Trinity Church for the ceremonial of Miss Sarah Endicott Dexter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott Dexter, and Howes Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Howes Burton of Cedarhurst, L. I.

DECORATIONS of the simplest—enormous white peonies at the altar, bright green tropical ferns and candlelight—and a petite girl bride attended by a flock of winsomely attired bridesmaids made the processional one of delicate beauty.

EXQUISITE ROSE point transparent as a spider web made the bridal veil. It also formed the close fitting cap bound simply with orange blossoms, and combined with cream satin formed the straightline gown.

A STRAND OF PEARLS about her neck, silver slippers on her feet, a cascade of blossoms on the skirt and yards and yards of billowy tulle completed a daintily girlish wedding costume for a dainty little bride.

GARDEN HATS, of floppy leghorn, bound with a simple deep blue ribbon and caught with two rosebuds at the brim, topped crisp and picturesquely fashioned mulle frocks for the bride's dozen attendants.

BY WAY OF ADORNMENT blue moire ribbon started from a shoulder knot of pink roses, was tied into a formal bow at the waistline and, weighted with two roses at its very end, formed a slender train for each gown. Bouquets were small and formal, in stiff lace holders.

MAYOR DOLAN'S WRIT DENIED BY COURT

Providence, June 22 (A.P.)—The Supreme Court today denied the petition of Mayor Joseph A. Dolan of Central Falls for a writ of mandamus commanding Chief of Police James McCarthy to submit himself to the sole supervision of the Mayor, on the ground that mandamus could only issue for the performance of a specific act, and that there was no specific act before the court.

For some time there has been friction between Mayor Dolan and Chief McCarthy, the former contending that the police head had refused to obey his orders.

ADS STIMULATE TRADE, SAYS LOUIS WILEY

Address to the Public Utilities Advertising Association Convention

Philadelphia, June 22.—"The enormous volume of trade in the United States today is proof of the stimulating force of advertising," said Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, in an address today before the Public Utilities Advertising Association.

It has "increased consumption, raised the standards of living and added enormously to our wealth," he asserted.

DEFINITE GOAL.

Speaking of public utilities advertising, Mr. Wiley said that "one of your great problems is the cultivation and maintenance of the community's goodwill toward your companies. In the solution of this problem newspaper advertising can play an important par. I do not urge that you take more advertising space in the newspapers, or to tell you that advertising will magically buy you good will. If you do not advertise intelligently, the better class of newspapers would prefer that you do not take space at all.

"Poorly conceived advertising will fail to bring you results and will hurt the reputation of this powerful business influence among you. Until you are convinced of what advertising will do for you; until you are ready to understand that what you say in your copy must be only the truthful reflection of your company's character and that advertising cannot conceal or atone for mistaken policies of management; until you have a definite goal to be achieved by taking space, I would advise you not to advertise."

VALUABLE ASSETS.

One of the most valuable assets of advertising among companies having extensive public relations, Mr. Wiley pointed out, is the influence it has on the company's own employes. Public utility advertising copy should be prepared with this in mind, he declared.

"But the point I am most interested in making is that the public utility companies would find it to their profit to adapt their copy to different newspapers. This is more trouble, but it is good advertising, and good advertising is profitable. Here again the department stores teach a lesson. They vary their advertising to suit the class of readers which the newspaper chiefly reaches."

MOUNTED OFFICER SAVES MANY FROM RUNAWAY

John McArdle

Mounted Officer John McArdle, well known YD veteran, on his trusty steed Ginger, today stopped a runaway horse on Broadway, and saved a number of pedestrians from injury.

The animal, attached to an ice wagon, bolted on Harrison avenue, and ran to B roadway, striking a parked automobile and forcing two women to leap for their lives to the sidewalk.

McArdle, who was some distance down the street, put spurs to his mount and overtaking the runaway seized it by the bridle and brought it to a stop.

MOTORIST BURNED IN CRASH WITH FIRE CHIEF

Trapped in his machine as it burst into flames after colliding with an automobile operated by District Fire Chief Ernest W. Williams of Lynn on the Newburyport turnpike today, Oscar Mahn of Minter street, East Boston, was severely burned about the face and body and badly cut by flying glass.

As the cars crashed near the Lynnfield-Saugus line both overturned. Chief Williams was accompanied by his wife and child, who were both bruised and shaken.

Berwick Shortcake

It's So Good-So Easy To Make

BERWICKIANS

By Neal O'Hara

It is always the June Bride's tough luck to be dumped right into the strawberry shortcake season.

Under the Marquis of Strawberry rules, she must start serving shortcake to her hubby or else there is a fight.

Yep, June is the month of roses, but shortcake is one of its thorns.

As cooks, June Brides are beautiful but bum. They may make pies like mother used to make. But when it comes to cream of tartar biscuits, they make bricks like father used to lay.

So, girls, be careful when you make that shortcake. Just because you whip the cream you do not have to punish your husband, too.

Beware the old-fashioned shortcake with the cream-of-mortar biscuit foundation. Remember, a strawberry shortcake should be eaten with a fork and not with the family ice pick.

There are twenty ways of whipping cream with an egg beater. There are forty ways for a bride to crush strawberries, not including sitting on them in a white flannel skirt. But there is only one way of baking those biscuits right.

* * *

Will you take that risk? Or will you buy a loaf of Berwick Sponge Cake and make your shortcake out of that?

—Neal O'Hara

Mr. O'Hara's Berwickians are a regular feature of Berwick advertising. They are presented solely to satisfy your sense of humor as Berwick Cake satisfies your sense of taste.

Heavy desserts went out of fashion when the modern knowledge of higher food values and balanced meals became a part of every housewife's education.

The ideal dessert of today must be appealing, tasty, and nutritious . . . . but not heavy. This is one reason that so many New England housewives and their families are enjoying Berwick Strawberry Shortcake these bright June days.

Berwick Shortcake! What mouth-watering visions that name conjures up. Golden yellow Berwick Sponge Cake . . . famous for its excellence for over a quarter of a century . . . Rich luscious blood-red strawberries . . . a liberal topping of whipped cream, sweetened to taste . . . truly a masterpiece in summer desserts.

Berwick Shortcake is so easy to make, too. No watching of torrid kitchen ovens on sultry summer days . . . no anxiety as to whether or not the cake will "Rise." Berwick master bakers look after that for the modern housewife . . . better in fact than most women thought it could be done.

Most New Englanders have learned the wonders of Berwick Shortcake. If you and your family have not done so . . . start to-day. Serve this best-of-all summer dessert and learn how really good . . . how delightfully satisfying strawberry shortcake really can be. The best shortcake for you . . . for your family . . . for your guests.

Ask Your Grocer He Knows!

Remember, all sponge cake that comes in boxes is not Berwick. Be sure the Berwick Shield of Satisfaction is stamped plainly on the carton. It is placed there for your protection against imitation.

BERWICK

The Berwick Company is a New England institution, operated by New Englanders, with products made to please New England people. We are always glad to receive letters of suggestion from our patrons throughout the territory.

SPITALNY GETS RECEPTION AT STATE

Conductor Is Playing His Farewell Engagement This Week

Philip Spitalny

The reception accorded Philip Spitalny on his appearance at Loew's State to play his farewell engagement this week proved that the audience had gathered to pay tribute to his popularity.

As Spitalny will leave Boston Sunday night to become guest conductor of the Loew's circuit. Each member of the band was presented and accorded individual applause.

The stage attractions offered with the band were, "The Four Footloose Fools," who lived up to their name in the manner of the steps they went through; Louise Loring, who charmed the audience with her rich soprano voice, offering several extra encores, and the Eddie Miller Duo in singing and dancing act.

1,500 TURNED AWAY AT POPS

Patrons of the Symphony Pops demonstrated that they knew their own minds musically. The Pops orchestra played its first request program, made up in accordance with a popular vote by audiences, over a period of weeks, and the patrons bore down on the box office in such numbers that between 1,500 and 2,000 were turned away.

So much did the demand for tickets exceed the supply, that the management announced it would repeat the request program on Thursday evening, July 1.

The program for tonight is as follows:

Berlioz	Hungarian March, "Rakoczy"
Weber	Overture to "Oberon"
Handel	Largo
(Solo violin, harp, organ, and strings)
Beethoven,	Scherzo from the Third Symphony, "Eroica."
Schumann	Traumerei
Sibelius	Valse Triste
Wagner	Overture to "Tannhauser"
Tchaikovsky	"1812"
Schubert	Moment Musicale
Brahms	Fifth Hungarian Dance

STARS OF FILM AT METROPOLITAN

SCREEN NOVELTY
Chester Conklin and Aileen Pringle present striking scenes in "The Wilderness Woman."

RING VETERANS GET OVATION

An ovation was accorded the two veterans of the prize ring, James J. Jeffries and Tom Sharkey, when they appeared on the stage of Loew's Orpheum. So warm was the applause which these two former rivals for the world's heavyweight championship received that it must have brought them back to the days when each was the recipient of much hero worship.

The old boys "went to it" in a three-round sparring exhibition at the end of their act and showed that they still carry a punch.

The other vaudeville turns furnished some excellent entertainment, with Bobby O'Neill, in "Four Queens and a Joker," and Larry Rich and Cherie in "We Two," standing out conspicuously. Several other acts also were offered.

SENATOR SEES 'CONSPIRACY'

Storm Lake, Ia., June 22 (A.P.).—Smith W. Brookhart, Republican Senatorial nominee, told a gathering of farmers here today that agriculture will have no chance in Congress until it elects a majority in both houses that will fight to a finish what he described as a "conspiracy of special interests."

"The Haugen bill faces imminent defeat. This defeat has been brought about by a gigantic conspiracy of special interests against the basic industry of our country," he said.

"These interests have devised a scheme of economy which denounces everything as economically unsound, unless it promotes their social welfare. Because of their size and prestige, they are able to control the views of statesmen and dictate the action of the United States Government.

"It is the settled belief of all the farm organizations and all of the labor organizations that ultimate relief from the intolerable oppression of great and unlawful combinations of wealth is to be found in co-operative organizations, which should be assisted in the first instance by the government as it has assisted other enterprises and especially by the governmental export corporation."

BRITISH ENVOY ILL NEAR HUB

Manchester, Mass., June 22 (A.P.)—Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, who is spending the Summer here, was confined to his bed today, suffering from the effects of a severe chill.

Sir Esme became ill suddenly yesterday, and was forced to cancel a speaking engagement in Boston.

His physician today pronounced his condition slightly improved and said he would be able to go out in a few days.

Autoist Pays $100 Fine

Raymond U. Sage of West Medford, who on June 9 was found guilty of operating an automobile so as to endanger the public, and fined $100, today appeared in the Somerville District Court, withdrew his appeal and paid.

'WILDERNESS WOMAN' A NOVEL HIT

Metropolitan Theatre Presents Stirring Film and Group of Beauties

The far famed rise of young Lochinvar out of the west could hardly have been a more magnificent spectacle than the helter-skelter descent on Broadway of "The Wilderness Woman" and her dad, to be seen now at the Metropolitan.

Not, however, that the much mustached Chester Conklin can be said to greatly resemble young Lochinvar, for there are those who might regard the comparison as somewhat unfair to both, but Chester is a gay and gallant hero just the same because he boldly encounters the perils of the big city and easily puts them down.

No plumed knight ever did more; no butter and egg man—however "big"—ever did as much! Uncouth but wealthy strangers within the gates of the city that "never gives a sucker an even break" generally end up low and dry just after they set out to hit the spots that are high and wet, but Mr. Conklin is the exception to this rule—and that is the gist of this very funny film.

Aileen Pringle in "The Wilderness Woman" and is far more interesting in her mail-order raiment than in the costlier frippery she usually appears in as the persecuted Russian princess of the Elinor Glyn fluff. Lowell Sherman, too, steps wide of his accustomed characters and this time forsakes his villainy and blooms forth as the righteous hero.

On he stage at the "Met" is presented Boris Petroff's "Charleston," a most lively and entertaining exhibition of this type of the dance. The Charleston champs of eleven cities with Annette Roy, the Boston expert strut and sway; three versatile musicians in the background lead the energetic syncopation, and the costumes and lighting are in tune.

"AMERICA" TO BE STAGED AT BRAVES FIELD

One of the most imposing spectacles ever presented in Boston will be staged at Braves Field for a period of fifteen days under the auspices of Aleppo Temple of the Mystic Shrine. This massive entertainment will be called "America," and will reproduce scenes descriptive of the more important historical events associated with the birth and development of the nation. It will open on Thursday, July 8, and will close on Saturday, July 24.

Week's Features

SCOLLAY SQUARE — "The Earth Woman," with Mary Alden and Priscilla Bonner.

NEW BOSTON—Tom Mix in "Tony Runs Wild."

NORUMBEGA PARK — Gangler's Comedy Circus and miscellaneous amusements.

MODERN—"Born To The West," with Jack Holt, Raymond Hatton and Margaret Morris. Also "Up in Mabel's Room" with Marie Prevost.

BOWDOIN SQUARE — "Siberia" with Alma Rubens, and "The Exquisite Sinner" with Renee Adoree.

BEACON — "Born To The West" with Jack Holt and Margaret Morris, and "Up In Mabel's Room" with Marie Prevost.

NEW ST. JAMES—"Behind The Front," with Wallace Berry and Raymond Hatton.

HIGH CLASS BILL AT KEITH'S

There's variety, quantity and quality in this week's bill at the Keith Theatre; variety that ranges from opera arias and character studies, to trained dogs and burlesque toe dancing; quantity that satiates the most avid vaudeville fan and quality that overbalances spots of mediocrity.

Aunt Jemima, billed as the "Flower of Vaudeville" and made up like her famous namesake of flapjack fame, scores heavily with a brand of blues and southland songs that ring with a genuine spirit.

Harry Thurston from the London Hippodrome, goes over big with his character studies of London life.

Jack Hewitt and Fred Hall, "Songland's Favorite Sons," uphold their reputation with a snappy melodious act served up in generous portions.

James Mullen and Anna Francis in "My Hero" offer an avalanche of tickling gags and wise cracks. Carlton Emmy's dogs furnish amusing comedy. Olga Myra, Betty Rees and company have an esthetic dance offering. Naomi Ray and Eddie Harrison cavort on the boards in an amusing burlesque on toe dancing. Bee Jung puts some humor into her trapeze work while Evelyn Phillips with Joe Seveney and Harold Price offer some clever hoofing.

Coming Events

Richard Dix in "Say It Again" will be the feature film at the Metropolitan for one week starting next Sunday.

Emil Jannings in "Othello" is announced as the principal film on the new bill at Loew's State next week.

'COMMON CLAY' PLEASES AT COPLEY

Mary Young's Performance Delights Her Capacity Audience

More than a few notable revivals of past triumphs in the drama have been visited upon the town with less spirited reception than that bestowed on Mary Young and Mr. Clive's resident company in their presentation at the Copley of Cleves Kinkead's former Harvard prize play, "Common Clay."

The capacity crowd, gripped by the unfortunate case of "Ellen Neal," hung on every word of the dialogue, and interrupted the performance at times to applaud the heavily underscored line or the telling bit of "business."

Treading the safe and sure path of a thoroughly familiar role Miss Young journeyed easily along the hard road of betrayed virtue, and came gloriously into the rewards of all-made-well in the happy ending of the epilogue.

Alan Mowbray brought loud approval in the first act by his portrayal of an alcoholicly inclined gentleman, whose preference for Scotch seemed about equal to his fondness for feminine conquest.

Norman Cannon was particularly effective in the role of the judge.

Pope Will War On Present Day Styles

Rome, June 22 (I.N.S.).—Pope Pius is planning a world-wide war against the present female modes, according to the Radio Nazionale. The Pope, this agency says, has not only issued instructions to Vatican chamberlains to bar women wearing short dresses and low-necked gowns from papal audiences, but has appealed to the delegates to the Young Women's Catholic Associations to fight against the extreme modes.

Italian priests are refusing admission to the church to women wearing what they believe to be immodest dresses.

STEAMER BRUNSWICK TAKES LARGE CARGO

The steamer Brunswick second vessel of the new Texas line, sailed today for Texas City with large miscellaneous cargo. This is the second of the new line to be put in operation since the service opened on June 15, when the steamer Lake Giddings made her maiden trip. Before sailing, Captain Asa F. Davison took office as first vice-president of the Black Diamond Steamship Corporation in addition to his duties with the new line.

BOSTON CARDINAL LAUDS CATHOLIC WOMEN

our minds today is figured faintly in what our eyes behold. This vast assemblage throbs with life. Our presence here is evidence of active devotion. We assemble as pilgrims at a sacred shrine after long and tedious journeys.

"Who can estimate the sum of human energy required to make possible this magnificent manifestation of honor and love to the holiest of holy causes? Add to our effort the ceaseless, tireless toil of the countless workers of this great city. What a moving vision of human activity and enthusiasm! Surely life surrounds us in this blessed spot.

Our outlook here is wider than the scope of human sight and higher than the upmost reaches of the human mind. We declare in this Congress our perfect faith in the divine life of Heaven's grace.

"This life Christ Our Lord came to purchase and to give. This life of grace is ours when we partake of the sacred food of the altar's table.

"The life, our minds and hearts contemplate today, is the one true life given by the flesh and blood of the Son of Man. Unless you eat of the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood you shall not have life in you.

"The body of man needs constant sustenance and nourishment. In God's providence nature furnishes the food essential to the body's life and growth. By the sweat of his brow man exacts from the fields and the beasts thereof assistance and protection for physical life. God provides all. We bow before God's bounty in providing for the earthly necessities of the children of men.

A LAND OF PLENTY

"Here in our beloved country our thankfulness is of necessity supreme. Nowhere in the world has God laid at the feet of His people more of nature's resources in support of the body's needs.

"Deep beneath the shell of the earth's surface lie buried our precious minerals and great ore deposits, the foundation of prosperity and wealth. Our fields are fertile. They give forth in abundance their fruits to tempt and to satisfy the appetite of man. Our people are industrious.

"With marvelous skill they produce and they distribute from great centres of population to every corner of this country the necessities for the support of human life.

"God has ordered it all. The American people take full advantage of Divine bounty in favor of the bodies of men.

"As the body lives under law, so does the soul. God, who has blessed our country with prodigious generosity, spoke through His Son, 'Be not solicitous for your life what you shall eat. Is not the life more than the meat?' And at another time and in another place He spoke words which teach us the sacred significance of this Congress. 'I am the bread of life. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is My flesh for the life of the world.'

"The soul of man, made to the divine image and likeness, lives under the law of sustenance. God's fatherly concern for the life of the soul has moved Him to an act of divine generosity beyond our comprehension. Our lips tremble in the great truth's utterance. The Omnipotent Creator, the Eternal Lover of the immortal destiny of man has Himself become the food of the human soul.

MUST BE BELIEVER

"Clearly and with divine authority the voice of God reveals the secret of the soul's support. 'I am the living bread. He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood abideth in Me and I in him.'

"Under intimate and constant contact with the divine presence in the Eucharist the soul grows firmer in faith, more confident in hope and more ardent in the fervor of divine charity. Let man offer his faith and his good will, grace accomplishes the rest.

"Man must labor to keep life in his body during its alloted years. Man must but believe and love to become a sharer in the gift of the Bread of Heaven for the life of his soul.

"The body's food is changed into the bone and fibre of the physical structure of man. The Bread of Life transforms the soul with the beauty and the power of God. He who avails himself of the unspeakable privilege of Holy Communion grows surely and steadily in the spirit and the virtue of Christ's own life on earth.

"Behold true life! Christ's life emulated and exemplified by humble partakers of the precious food of His divine institution!

PRAISE FOR WOMEN

"Witness the truth of this incontestable fact. Down through the centuries ardent sons and daughters of the Church have shown in manifold ways the charity of Christ. In caring for the sick, the orphan and the aged, the love of those who live by the Blessed Sacrament has found worthy and blessed expression.

"Amid the sacrifices inseparable from the struggle to carry God's revelation of truth and grace to the pagan peoples of the Far East, the noble foreign missionaries of the church draw life and strength for their conquest from God's presence there in the Blessed Eucharist.

"In our own country the arduous responsibility of preserving and perpetuating Christian truth by means of Christian education is borne from day to day by holy religious who live by the Blessed Sacrament. In truth, God with us on the Altar is the life of the church and of all her members at all times and everywhere.

"In all these impressive and beautiful manifestations of charity in the world, the women of the Church have given powerful and brilliant example. From the sad hours of the faithful women at Calvary through all the vicissitudes and struggles of the Church's history, the hearts of Catholic women have ever been deeply receptive of the holy message of God's love for mankind.

"Today, as always, true Catholic womanhood is a tower of strength and beauty. The presence here of this vast multitude of Catholic women to do honor to their Lord in the Eucharist is inspiring evidence of virtue and devotion.

"We behold before us representatives of the thousands of our religious women who in sublime self-denial and heroism bless our country with their prayers and good works. We behold holy mothers of Catholic families whose sanctifying influence is the soul of their Christian homes. We behold noble, loyal women giving their lives in the spirit of faith to the advancement of professional and business life.

"Can we remain unmoved before this inspiring and consoling spectacle? We bow in gratitude to God for the life of grace He so generously gives to these children of His own Mother, effective missionaries of Christian principles and Christian ideals.

"Be mindful always, beloved women, of the great realtiy by which you live. Be true to the divine source of your life, your virtue and your love of the interests of Christ. In the precious moment of Holy Communion, in the quiet hour of your visit to the Blessed Sacrament, you meet Him who gives you power to help others in the ways of His will.

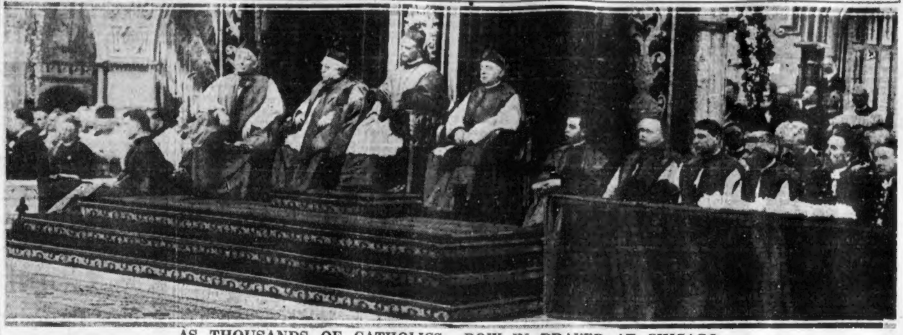
"Living in Christ and through Christ your lives become a bounteous benediction to your homes, your families and to all who approach your holy influence.

ASKS DIVINE BLESSING

"Let it be ever so. True to your inheritance, true to the traditions of Christian womanhood, walk constantly in the companionship of Christ. He, who loves His Blessed Mother, loves you. With His divine life He strengthens and consoles you.

"May His presence and His guidance bless your homes and your works. May His truth and His grace enlighten all your days. May His love and the life he gives reward you abundantly and eternally."

PAPAL LEGATE ON EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS THRONE



AS THOUSANDS OF CATHOLICS BOW IN PRAYER AT CHICAGO

Hub Plays Big Role at Church Congress

By JAMES WALSH,
(Staff Correspondent of the Boston Evening American with Boston Pilgrims to Eucharistic Congress).

Soldiers' Field Stadium, Chicago, June 22.—Under sunny skies the third day of the greatest Eucharistic Congress in history opened at the Stadium today. All roads led to Soldiers' Field. The pilgrims from every corner of the earth came in autos, in motor buses, in every sort of conveyance available, and many thousands on foot.

James Walsh.

The 500 pilgrims with Cardinal O'Connell's party returned from their position 20 miles out in Lake Michigan at 9 this morning, the regulations closing the Link bridge the other side of which the South American tied up between six and nine.

The attendance is larger even than that of yesterday. The weather is what Bostonians call "Cardinal's weather."

Cardinal O'Connell, the presiding prelate of the day, was attended by Monsignors R. J. Haberlin and M. J. Splaine as chaplains of honor. Walter E. Guyette, Knight Commander of the Holy Sepulchre adn Knight of St. Gregory, Humphrey O'Sullivan, K. S. G., James P. Phelan of Lynn, K. H. S., all in the uniform of their Knighthood, and the Cuban charge-d'affaires also attended the Boston Cardinal Archbishop.

When Cardinal O'Connell took his position of honor on the Episcopal throne at the Gospel side of the Sanctuary the great choir and assemblage arose en masse and sang "The Star Spangled Banner." Cardinal O'Connell and his suite stood.

John Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate to the Congress, and George Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago, paid an official visit to Cardinal O'Connell on the steamer South American, returning the one made on Sunday afternoon by the Boston cardinal.

The visit was entirely unexpected and was very informal. When informed that the papal legate and the Chicago cardinal were on the wharf and wished to pay their respects, Cardinal O'Connell immediately went to the lower after saloon of the South American and welcomed both.

Then the three prelates retired to Cardinal O'Connell's parlor on the ship and chatted informally. Cardinal Mundelein expressed his happiness at the great throngs that had come from Boston and all parts of the world, declaring it was expressives of the love of Catholics for Christ in the Blessed Eucharist.

Most of the Boston pilgrims were on board when the visit was made. Both visiting cardinals gave them their blessing and the pilgrims kissed the ring of the papal legata.

Cardinal Bonzano told them he was happy to be back in America again even if it was only for a brief visit and wished them all a happy and safe journey home. Shortly after the papal legate and Cardinal Mundelein left the boat, Cardinal O'Connell, accompanied by the Right Rev. Mgr. Richard J. Haberlin, DD., his secretary, and the chancellor of the archdiocese, left the steamer to attend a dinner given to all the visiting cardinals by Cardinal Mundelein at his residence.

The scene at Soldiers Field was one that will linger for a long time in the memory of all those who could get inside the gates, as well as by the enormous throng that could not get in.

Owing to the stringent traffic regulations laid down by the police, automobiles and other vehicles were permitted to drive only within a certain distance of the stadium.

Consequently many of the visiting pilgrims, including some of the Boston party, failed to get inside the gates. Most of them returned to the steamer or else occupied their time in walking about the loop district and making purchases.

Many of the Boston official party, as well as those who have come along with other New England delegations or independently visited the two sectional meetings for English-speaking groups at the Coliseum. Others visited the Municipal Pier, where there is an exhibition of church articles.

Woburn comes into the limelight tomorrow night. Mayor William E. Dever, a native of that flourishing city north of Boston, will give a dinner in honor of the Woburn delegation on board the South American with the Cardinal's party. The affair will be held at the Palmer House.

Those who will attend include the Rev. John P. Gorham, pastor of St. Charles' Church; the Rev. James F. Doherty, a native of Woburn; Mrs. Katherine Cunningham, Thomas Connolly, Mrs. Mary Dorrington, Miss Catherine Duffy, Mrs. James Murray, her two daughters, Margaret and Dorothy, and her son, James, and Miss Agnes Carr, well-known Boston newspaper woman.

All the time they have to spare between meals and the various congress services and meetings is filled up by the Boston delegation, many groups taking in the shopping district.

Mgr. Arthur T. Connolly of the Church of the Most Blessed Sacrament, Jamaica Plain; the Rev. James Doherty of St. Catherine's, the Rev. T. J. Holland of Revere and the Rev. Joseph P. Mahar, pastor of the Church of Our Lady Help of Christians, Concord Junction, are still minus the score of the Holy Cross-Boston College game.

Ever since the party left Buffalo Father Doherty has asked the Boston Evening American representative if he has yet learned the final score. He has a hunch that Holy Cross won the game. He is an alumnus of the college on the hill up at Worcester, and almost believes the game still is in progress and that the Holy Cross team is still scoring runs.

Mrs. Michael F. Foley of Brookline is renewing old acquaintances who were with her on the Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome last year.

INDEPENDENT TAXI MEN RE-ELECT OWENS HEAD

The Independent Taxi Owners' Association re-elected Thomas Owens president for a third time at its annual election. Henry Francesca was chosen vice-president. Other officers elected were: Financial-secretary and treasurer, George Naymie; sergeant-at-arms, Clement Van Lanningham; trustees, Harry Raferty, Barney Goodman and James Anderson.

Hot Oats
prepared faster now than plain toast

OATS used to take a while to cook. Now they're ready in 3 to 5 minutes.

Thus starting days with less nourishing foods is a folly.

Quick Quaker supplies the excellently "balanced" ration of protein, carbohydrates, vitamines and the "bulk" (to make laxatives less often needed) that active people need to carry on the day.

Get Quick Quaker. Food that's delicious; food that "stands by" through the morning. Start each day that way.

"It never rains but it pours!" Again we were not wholly prepared for so truly remarkable a response. Warned by last year's experience, we had planned for a most liberal increase in attendance. We had twice the space, three times as many cashiers, four times as many bundle wrappers as the year before—and it was not enough. We bought and bought till our storage facilities were literally choked with fine coats—hundreds more than last year—and there were not enough. In appreciation for last Monday's marvelous response, as a service we feel we owe to those who did not find their size or color, we stage this Encore Final Sale. New coats! New savings! 333 GRADUATED BY DARTMOUTH

Hanover, N. H., June 22 (A.P.).—Dartmouth College graduated 333 men today at its 157th commencement. Degrees of bachelor of science were given to 197 men and 136 were made bachelors of art.

Nine honorary degrees were conferred by President Ernest M. Hopkins. Speakers included Donald Kincaide Mackay of Quincy, Mass., on "Dartmouth Loyalty."

Receiving honorary degrees were: Master of arts, Charles Gilbert Milham, '06, Los Angeles, Cal.; Harlan Colby Pearson, '93, secretary to the Governor of New Hampshire; doctor of commercial science, Frank Herbert Harrison, '76, Wellesley, Mass., doctor of divinity, Walter Amos Morgan, '11, Chicago, pastor of the First Congregational Church; doctor of science, George Fiske Hardy, '88, New York city; Arthur Riler Ruggles, '02, Providence, pschiatrist, Yale Medical School; doctor of laws, Robert J. Peaslee, '98, Manchester, honorary Chief Justice of New Hampshire Supreme Court; James Stockwell, New York city, director of Carnegie endowment for international peace, and professor of history, Columbia University, and Sir Frederick White, London, editor.

AWARD DEGREE TO OWEN YOUNG

Princeton, N. J., June 22 (A.P.).—Owen D. Young, chairman of the Board of the General Electric Company, today was awarded the honoraray degree of laws at the 179th Commencement exercises of Princeton University.

Eight other honorary degrees were conferred and 230 members of the graduating class received the degrees of bachelor of arts, 142 bachelor of science and 12 bachelor of engineering.

Other recipients of honorary degrees were:

Rev. Robert Wilson Hamilton moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Ireland, and Rev. Dubois Schanck Morris, missionary to China, doctor of divinity.

John Fleming Main, chief justice of Washington, doctor of Laws.

Dr. William Holland Wilmer, eye specialist, doctor of science.

Archibald Allan Bowman, Princeton professor of philosophy, and William Augustus White, Harvard graduate, doctor of letters.

William Gilbert Van Tassel Sutphen, short story writer, and William M. Hudson, president of Blackburn College, Illinois, master of arts.

SENIORS MERRY AT RADCLIFFE

Radcliffe College seniors made merry at their annual class day exercises, held in Agassiz Theatre. Gifts, pertinent to the personal fancy of each girl, were presented by Constance Doe, Columbus, O., amid shreiks of laughter.

Relentlessly, it seemed, Miss Doe chided and censured her classmates with "unfortunate" reminders of feminine penchants in the way of parasols, stuffed police officers, playing cards, "trots" and other joking miniatures. And "Lampy," the Harvard bugbear of Radcliffe girls, too, was taken for a bumping ride over Radcliffe coals.

The program was led by Ruth Bass, class president, and Lydia A. Cutler, marshal. Barbara McQuesten, Brookline, read the class history; Ruth Kimball, the poem; Katherine Henry, the will, and Constance Doe presented the gifts.

"WET" CANDIDATE VICTOR AT MINNESOTA POLLS

St. Paul, Minn., June 22 (A.P.).—Minnesota Republicans have nominated as their first prohibition modification advocate to Congress a 28-year-old man, the youngest ever chosen by the State for that office. They also renominated Governor Theodore Christianson.

Melvin J. Maas, the victor in the primary, polled as many votes as his two opponents together to win the nomination in the Fourth District, which includes St. Paul.

Governor Christianson, running again on an "economy" platform, defeated Mayor George E. Leach of Minneapolis for the gubernatorial nomination.

TRADITION IS SHATTERED AT YALE

New Haven, Ct., June 22 (A.P.).—Customs change, even in such old-time institutions as Yale, for at this, the 225th Commencement, the graduation program was cut in twain, seniors being given their degrees today, while honorary and professional school degrees will be conferred tomorrow. The Tuesday of commencement week has always been alumni day. For the first time the alumni meeting of the morning was given up and the time used for a commencement session in Woolsey Hall, preceded by the procession of candidates for degrees in course.

WOOLSEY HALL TOO SMALL.

The change in program has been forced by lack of accommodation for all candidates for degrees, with alumni and guests, in Woolsey Hall.

The graduation exercises of Yale College and Sheffield Scientific School, held today, followed precedent. President James Rowland Angell presided.

Basil Davenport of Louisville, Ky., received highest academic honors and the De Forest prize of $100 given the senior who wrote and pronounced an English oration in the best manner.

WINS $500 PRIZE.

Charles H. Willard of Minneapolis received the Alpheus Henry Snow prize of $500 for combination of intellectual achievement, fine character and personality. The Warren Memorial high school scholarship prize went to George W. Pierson of New York, who had the highest rank in scholarship among candidates for the bachelor of arts degree.

Dana Yung Kwai of Washington, called "the most brilliant" in his class in Sheff, received the Russell Henry Chittenden prize for highest rank among the candidates for bachelor of science degree.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE ON RYE BEACH OUTING

The third annual outing of the members of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange was held today at the Farragut House, Rye Beach, N. H. Upwards of 200 members and their wives and lady friends left the Pemberton Building at noon in automobiles. During the afternoon games and sports were indulged in and after the evening banquet dancing was in order.

M'MILLAN PARTY TO BE FETED AT BAR HARBOR

Rockland, Me., June 22 (A.P.).—The sub-Arctic expedition schooners Bowdoin and Sachem left port early today for Bar Harbor, their next port of call, before proceeding to Yarmouth, N. S. The weather was cloudy and the wind southwest. Commander Donald B. MacMillan was notified on the eve of his departure of the entertainment awaiting him at Maine's Summer metropolis, including a dinner to be given tonight by Guy H. Torrey, a member Governor's Council.

IT LOOKED LIKE RAIN, AND IT DID RAIN—FRUIT

It looked like rain all day, but nobody expected such a shower until a taxi driver, coasting along Tremont street near Beacon, bumped a one-man pushcart. The downpour came—apples, oranges, cherries, bananas, and even bags of peanuts. It was a great chance for the kids. They made the most of it. But the hundreds of passers-by who stormed one of Boston's busiest corners raised havoc with traffic.

Story of a Boston Girl Who Liked Jazz Music and the Bright Lights

"He'll never get a chance to break a date with me again, I'll bet," declared Cassie.

READ THIS FIRST

MERRY LOCKE falls in love with an unknown man whom she passes every day on the street. To fall in love is nothing new to Marry. She has been doing it ever since she was sixteen years old. But this time she feels she has found the Real Thing.

On her twentieth birthday, Merry decides that somehow or other she will make the Man in Gray, as she calls the stranger, speak to her. She drops her handbag at his feet when she meets him on the street at noon. But instead of speaking to her, he gives it to her and gravely goes on his way.

Merry fails in two tests at business college. She dreads breaking this to MOMS.

At home she sees her sister, CASSIE, drive up to the house with the Man in Gray. Cassie says she cannot remember his name, when Merry questions her about him, but tells her that he is a lawyer she has met.

That night Merry takes her youngest sister, JINNY, to the circus. DERRICK JONES, a college boy, who lives next door, goes with them. Merry finds herself separated from Derrick and Jinny, and meets the Man in Gray. He takes her home, and kisses her at the gate, against her will. Merry knows that she has fallen in love with him, but she doesn't want this love affair to end like all the rest of hers—in "petting parties."

The next day Merry meets him at noon.

CHAPTER VII.

IN a restaurant [illegible] they found a table for two.

Why is it that those who are young and in love always seem to find their [illegible]? Surely it is not because they are hungry for food [illegible] love takes away the appetite.

Perhaps it is because there is something so cozy [illegible] about sitting at a little table and looking across it into a pair of beloved eyes.

Merry looked at the man whose name was Gaines and he looked at her and they both [illegible]. They smiled because they were young and in love, and because life was good.

"I don't even know your name, Miss Locke."

"Merry — and what's yours, Mr. Gaines?"

"Anthony," he answered, "but people always call me Tony. What would you like to eat, Merry?"

Merry shrugged her little shoulders. "Anything," she said, and [illegible]

TOLERANCE IN QUEBEC ON WINE

Administration of Liquor Law Pleases Wets and Drys, Says Hapgood

Norman Hapgood, noted writer and editor, is now in Canada for the purpose of making a thorough survey of the workings of the liquor laws being tried out in five of the nine provinces there. In order to get a comprehensive knowledge of the situation he has associated with clergymen, government officials, newspaper men, business heads, and even mixed with inebriates. The result of his investigations are told in a series of articles written for the Hearst newspapers, the third of which is printed here today.

ARTICLE NO. 3

By NOMAN HAPGOOD,
Universal Service Correspondent.
Copyright, 1926 by Universal Service.

Montreal, June 22.—In accounting for the success of the Quebec liquor system a feature that must not be left out is Latin tolerance, where morals are concerned. Lady Astor told me last Summer that she believed the future of the world depended on the Puritan conscience. If she were roaming around the French streets of this town with me I fear she might not be satisfied.

The system that has finally come into existence, and given so much satisfaction, is in reality a compromise between the British and the French points of view. What prohibition has been tried, and is being tried, in various parts of the Dominion is British in its origin.

The French who are in a majority in Quebec would never have felt the need of interfering with drink at all. Finally enough check has been worked out to satisfy the British and not annoy the French.

WINE IN HOME.

A great difference between this province and others lies in the fact that the farmers are French. The French farmer starts out at 4 o'clock in the morning or 7 o'clock, according to the season, and comes home at 6. He has taken with him a quart of light wine, of which he has absorbed three-quarters at his heavy noon meal, and the rest at what we call tea.

When the family sits down to its light supper there is more wine and an aperatif, or appetizer, of the strength of sherry. This last meal

HUB PILGRIM

Mrs. Edward C. Monahan of Hyde Park, who was married the day before they started for Chicago. Dr. and Mrs. John E. Murray of Somerville were also wed on that day. The two couples met on the pilgrimage.

518 QUIT FORCE IN 6 YEARS

Hours of Punishment for Hub Finest Figured at 75,000 Hours by Statistician

Boston has had the free services of one composite policeman for at least 23½ years during the past six years, it came out today when a fervent statistician delved into the police records.

The statistician discovered that the police department in the six years before the police strike (from 1913 to 1918 inclusive) offers a startling comparison in the way of erring officers and department turnovers from the six years after the strike—1920 to 1925 inclusive.

Here's the record for those first six years: Cops fired, [illegible]; resigned, 108 (most of them in 1918 to take better paying wartime jobs); before trial boards, only in rare instances.

And here's the record for the six years after the strike:

Policemen dismissed, 231; resigned [illegible] 618 [illegible] before trial boards, 869.

And before these trial boards the policemen who were [illegible] not dismissed received [illegible] days which [illegible] hours a man for those [illegible], but which the statistician figured at about a total of 75,000 hours to be conservative.

One man, working the usual police shift of ten hours a day, with one day off in eight, would need twenty-three and one-half years to get the total 75,000 punishment hours wiped out.

ACTRESS LASHED ON BARE FLESH

Violet Anderson, 20, model and motion picture actress, was beaten into insensibility, her clothing was torn off, and then she was lashed by her two assailants on the bare flesh with their belts, she told the White Plains, N. Y., grand jury. Nina Wilcox Putnam told the grand jury who the men are. They have fled to Canada.

WORE RICH GOWN AND JEWELS

Regina Flory, French Actress, Refused Job, Commits Suicide in English Theatre

London, June 22 (A.P.).—When Mlle. Regina Flory, French actress and dancer, shot herself while talking with Director Sir Alfred Butt in his office in the Drury Lane Theatre, a French detective who had followed her from Paris was waiting in the next room to guard against just such a tragedy.

This was brought out today at the coroner's inquest, which resulted in a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind.

Mlle. Flory, who is said to have [illegible] and at one time addicted to cocaine, had some time before her death threatened suicide, and a detective, Francois Semaine, had been set to watch her. The fatal shot came without warning.

BEAUTIFULLY GOWNED.

Mlle. Flory, who had gone to see the director of the theatre to ask for an engagement in England, was [illegible] gowned and bejeweled when she took her life.

The detective said he had informed Sir Alfred that Mlle. Flory had a pistol when she left Paris and that she had threatened suicide. As the customs officials found no weapon [illegible] on her arrival in England the theatrical manager thought little of the report.

BEHIND DOOR.

The detective arranged with Sir Alfred to be in the next room during the interview. When Mlle. Flory entered the director's office Semaine took up a position behind the door of the adjoining room prepared to rush in if she became excited.

Mlle. Flory asked for an engagement and on being informed there was nothing available at the time asked Sir Alfred's advice about an offer she said she had received from the Shuberts to play in "Maritza" in America for $1,500 weekly.

TWO KILLED IN BURNING PLANE

Mitchel Field, N. Y., June 22 (A.P.)—Major W. I. Moose Jr. and William Point, a West Point cadet, were killed today when an army observation plane piloted by Major Moose fell [illegible] feet and burned on the [illegible] golf course at East Meadow, L. I., today.

There were no eyewitnesses to the actual crash, but those in the observation tower at the flying field saw the big De Haviland go into a slow spiral and disappear behind a clump of trees. A bright flash [illegible] followed.

Cadet Point was the son of Lieutenant [illegible] W. T. Point of the Quartermaster Corps. His home was Washington, D. C. He was taking a short course in aeronautics.

CHILD LAUGHS, IS KILLED

Worcester, June 22 (A.P.)—Rose Marchese, ten, died at the City Hospital today from a bullet wound in the head received [illegible]. Nicola Fluetaci, [illegible] alleged assailant, is being [illegible] by police on a charge of [illegible].

A childish [illegible] is believed by the police to have been responsible for the tragedy.

Child witnesses told the police Rose had laughed when Fluetaci told her to stop playing a phonograph. The man had been sitting at a table drinking beer. When the child did not obey his command Fluetaci went into a side room and appeared a moment later with a rifle and, pointing it at the child, fired.

CHAPTER XIII
FIRST MEETING WITH MY LAWYER

OFF we went to North Brookfield for our Summer vacation (1895). I went into seclusion and started out to make a record as a sketch writer by pounding out one-act plays at the rate of not less than two a week.

"Why don't you quit grinding for a while, son, and get out and play a little baseball with the boys?" dad used to say.

"Yes, I wish you would, Georgie." This from mother.

"I'm busy today—I'll play tomorrow." But tomorrow never came.

Not that I didn't enjoy playing around as much as other boys my age, but I was having so much fun with my work that the work seemed to me to be nothing but fun.

There was one young fellow in this town who took quite a fancy to me. His name was Dennis O'Brien.

We are about the same age and

DESHON ADMITS HIS GUILT

Albert Deshon, convicted of manslaughter in the killing of Patrolman Frank J. [illegible] today pleaded guilty in Suffolk Superior Court before Justice Hall to five indictments, three charging breaking and entering and the two others charging respectively robbery while armed and theft of an automobile.

Stanley B. Toothaker, acquitted by the same jury that found Deshon guilty of manslaughter, pleaded guilty to three indictments charging breaking and entering and theft of an auto.

BOTH PLEADED GUILTY

[illegible] Attorney Henry [illegible] Parry appeared [illegible] and Bernard J. [illegible] for Toothaker.

Deshon pleaded guilty to two separate charges of [illegible] armed Thomas [illegible] and [illegible] and stealing jewelry.

BREAKING AND ENTERING.

Both pleaded guilty to having broken and entered the home of Joseph Applebaum on March [illegible] and stolen batteries [illegible]. Both also pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the home of William Scott on March 9 and stealing $10 in cash.

They also entered a plea of guilty to the charge of [illegible] automobile on March [illegible] of [illegible].

The two who pleaded guilty today together with John Robert Samboursky will be sentenced on Thursday. Samboursky has pleaded [illegible] while armed [illegible] of an automobile [illegible]. Toothaker was acquitted of murdering the Dorchester policeman.

Held in Church Fire

Toronto, June 22 (A.P.)—William Skeeby was arrested, charged with attempting to blow up with dynamite on June 10 St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church. The police say Skeeby told them he had been [illegible] by [illegible] to do the work. He is thirty years old.

COL. A. G. BULLOCK OF WORCESTER DIES AT 79

Worcester, June 22.—A. George Bullock, [illegible] vice-president of the State Mutual Life Assurance Company, died here this morning at his home. Col. Bullock, whose family is one of the oldest in the United States, was the son of Governor Alexander Hamilton Bullock, who had a reputation as an editor, writer, financier and State Republican leader.

He was closely associated with J. P. Morgan, Sr., for many years and was said to be the only man in Worcester who knew Morgan intimately.

Trial Visit for Daugherty

[illegible] (I.N.S.).—Draper Daugherty, son of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, has been granted a "trial visit" from the State Insane Asylum here, Dr. [illegible] Clark, superintendent of the institution announced today.

PROMOTERS POSTPONE MORGAN-HERMAN RING DUEL

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

The Philadelphia Colored Giants will be at Dorchester town field tonight to meet Jim Butler's Neponset town team.

BOUTS HIT BY WEATHER CONDITIONS

Entire Card of Bouts at Revere Is Set Back Until Thursday Night

By JACK CONWAY.

TOD MORGAN, world's junior light champion, and Babe Herman will have to wait until Thursday night to settle the question of supremacy in the ring of the Cycle A. C. of Revere.

Colonel Bob McKirdy put on his spectacles at noon today and after giving the sky the up and down decided that weather conditions were too unfavorable for an outdoor boxing show tonight. He then put his fistic carnival over until Thursday evening so as not to conflict with the Sharkey-Gorman muss, which will be staged at Braves Field tomorrow night.

Jack Conway

Morgan won his title when he knocked out Mike Ballerino in a tussle on the Coast. He later came East and stopped Kid Sullivan, former world junior lightweight king. Morgan's title will not be at stake Thursday as the weight for the bout is one pound above the [illegible] limit, 130 pounds.

The champion has here hailed as a new Terry McGovern. He is an aggressive two-handed fighter who is able to sock with either hand.

Frank Churchill, who piloted Pancho Villa to the world's flyweight crown, is managing Morgan. He says that his new protege is just as colorful a performer as the sensational Villa was when at the crest of his fighting wave.

MORGAN and Herman have been here since Sunday and both report they are in the best of condition and prepared to battle at a lively clip from the bell in the first round.

The weight for the match will find Herman strong and capable of putting up his best battle. Babe was convinced, after losing to Chick Suggs, that he cannot make the weight required of him in matches with featherweights and still do himself justice.

Herman, like Honeyboy Finnegan, will do better fighting as a junior lightweight rather than as a featherweight.

An effort will be made to match the winner of tonight's tussle with Honeyboy, who recently scored such an impressive victory over Joe Bick.

The speculative element has installed Morgan a favorite [illegible] quarter. They can't see how the champion can fail to smash through to victory.

JOHNNY HILL, a new Filipino boxer, will be on the job in the eight-round semi-final. He will have Herman Kid Silvers of Ansonia as an opponent.

Frank Churchill, who manages Hill, says the latter is as great a boxer as Villa. [illegible] We shall have a better line on Hill's ability [illegible] we have seen [illegible] night.

There will be three six-round preliminaries. Jack Hart of England will clash with Homer Robertson of [illegible]. Tom Lang of England [illegible] Eddie Travers of Dorchester, while Larry Brignolia will have Frankie De Rosa as an opponent.

MALCEWICZ AND LEWIS TRAIN AT REVERE

Strangler Lewis and Joe Malcewics will continue their training today at the Revere Cycle Track for their world's championship wrestling bout which will be staged at Braves Field on July 1.

Malcewics will have the centre of the stage between 1:30 and 3 o'clock, while Lewis will work from 3 o'clock until 4:30.

The rival wrestlers showed to advantage in their initial workout at the beach oval. Malcewics came here from Utica, N. Y., where he has been in training for two weeks. Joe looked to be in the best of condition and is confident he will be able to conquer Lewis in their title skirmish.

The Strangler made the trip East by auto. The big fellow wrestled at Denver on June 17 and so is already fit. He will keep active at the beach track every day this week and during the early part of next week.

Howard Cantowine will act as Lewis' chief sparring partner. Cantowine has proved a sensation in his Boston matches. He will also show at the Braves Field carnival in a finish match with Ned McGuire, Irish heavyweight.

Stanley Stasiak, who mingles with Toots Mondt in the semi-final, is likely to join the camp of Malcewicz.

McGraw Wins

New York, June 22.—Phil McGraw, Detroit lightweight, outpointed Georgie Balduc of Lewiston, Me., in a ten-round bout here.

Yale Yearlings Take Water With Haphazard Alignment

New London, Ct., June 22 (I.N.S.).—Mike Murphy, freshman coach at Yale, had a yearling crew on the water today, in spite of the loss of six men who were disqualified for "cribbing" in examinations, and it seemed entirely probable that the Bulldog would be able to take the water for the big regatta on Friday.

The new crew was made up of Morris, bow; Fenton, No. 2; Cookman, No. 3; Shroeder, No. 4; Silliman, No. 5; Brewster, No. 6; Jenkins, No. 7; Drake, stroke; Gilman, coxswain.

They were recruited in a most haphazard way, following the freshman scandal, and early today it had not been determined definitely whether they were in physical condition to row a hard race.

Both of the varsities planned to take the water today for brisk trials. Yale remained a favorite but there was plenty of Harvard money in town, to be placed at the prevailing odds.

SWIMMER HAVING BEST TIME TO GET MAINE TRIP

The Rangeley Lake, Me., water carnival committee has awarded as a prize to the swimmer making the best time in the City of Boston 880-yard race on the Charles River basin July 5, a free trip to their carnival.

This carnival is scheduled at Mountain View, Me., on July 9 to [illegible], at which time the New England 880-yard championship race for men swimmers will be held.

Baker Choice to Whip Sam Cohen

New York, June 22.—Sergeant Sammy Baker, Joe Malone and Joey Ross have been installed the choices over Meyer Cohen, Allentown Johnny Leonard and Mannie Wexler in the speculation on tonight's three ten-round battles at the Queensboro Stadium. In the special six-round number, Harry Ebbetts is a slight favorite over Eddie McLaughlin.

Those recalling the previous battle between Baker and Cohen feel confident that Sergeant Sammy's murderous right hand wallop will down the Hawkeye slugger, but Cohen is not lacking supporters.

Malone's brilliant victory over Lew Hurley two weeks ago is responsible for the popular young Bronxite being nominated to whip Leonard. Allentown Johnny, however, is a rough, tough, aggressive hard hitting individual.

WESTERN GOLFERS FACE HARD TASK IN TOURNEY

St. Louis, June 22 (A.P.).—Facing the alternative of shooting a score of 160 or lower, or abandoning hope of entering the championship flight, more than 200 golfers of the Middle West today played off the second eighteen holes of the thirty-six-hole qualifying round of the annual trans-Mississippi golf tournament over the Algonquin course here.

Gloucester Now Has Berth in Twi League

By EDDIE DONDERO

The city of Gloucester, famous because of its reputation as a fishing port, becomes an auxiliary branch in the Twilight League tomorrow evening. This almost seems unbelievable but Frank Donavan personally declared today that his Salem club has enough thunder to make it a worth while proposition.

Not for [illegible] was ever attempted before in that section. [illegible] professional baseball [illegible] was appealed to the natives. There never was many fans there [illegible] [illegible] used their time and money on Donavan's [illegible].

The opening contest tomorrow between [illegible] the former Salem delegation would ordinarily attract some 3,000 rabid fans.

There always is a beginning to everything [illegible] changes [illegible] Twilight League [illegible] merits of [illegible] been [illegible] to [illegible]. Salem has [illegible] and there is [illegible] the [illegible] not [illegible] series.

"Y" Tennis Team Seek Opponents

The tennis committee of the Huntington avenue branch of the Boston Y. M. C. A. has picked a team to represent the association for the 1926 season. The team consists of R. M. Baker, J. W. Peard, J. K. Lynch, H. W. Abbott, F. S. Holmes and H. S. Wingfield.

Manager Woodruff has written to a number of clubs and associations for matches. The first match has been arranged with the Brockton Y. M. C. A.

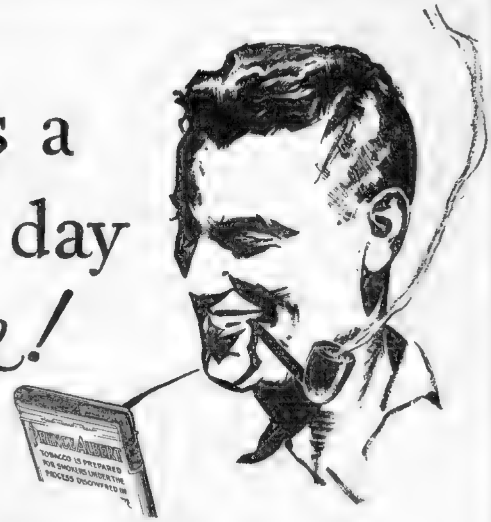
MISS SHERWOOD OUT OF HARLECH TENNIS

Harlech, Wales, June 22 (A.P.).—The only American representative in the British Women's Golf Championship Tournament withdrew today, when Miss Rosamond Sherwood of Boston defaulted to Mrs. G. R. Long.



That was a red-letter day for me!

THE day I discovered the tidy red tin was a red-letter day for me. Up until that time, I was fairly well satisfied with my smoking tobacco. At the suggestion of a friend, I tried a pipe-load of his Prince Albert. More to please him than for any other reason.

Little did I realize then what a big favor he was doing me. I'll never forget that experience. Here I was, a seasoned smoker (as I thought), learning something new about tobacco. Why, that very first taste won me. Still, I wasn't hasty. I tried another load to be certain.

That settled it. I bought a tidy red tin of P. A. right then and there. That was a good many years ago, but P. A. is still ministering to my smoke-taste, repeating my early experience many times a day. P. A. is so cool and sweet and fragrant, you just never tire of it.

No matter how hard you hit it up, P. A. never backfires. It is uniformly mild and mellow. Never bothers your throat or tongue. It is so genuinely friendly that you just go to it from morning to midnight. Cool contentment in every perfect puff. Get some P. A. today.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Runyon Says:

Walker Was Great Champ
Invaded Rival Camps Three Times in Penn.
Beat Light-Heavy King
His Fight With Greb

—By Damon Runyon—

(Copyright 1926, by International Features Service.)

SOME ten years from now when the [illegible] are talking about their great welterweight fighters, we of this particular era of The Manly Art of Scrambling Ears will [illegible] and mumble [illegible] and [illegible] say, and [illegible] we will tell them about a welterweight fighter of our time, [illegible] who was [illegible] a world's champion at twenty-one by beating the [illegible] boxer of the period and who in the course of his [illegible] career of about four years [illegible] heavyweight champion [illegible] the [illegible] Damon Runyon [illegible] the home towns of some of the toughest [illegible] of his day and asked [illegible] of their own [illegible] in TEN-ROUND bouts. [illegible] Mickey Walker, of Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Damon Runyon

I SAY we will be telling of him ten years from now because it will take that long for proper appreciation of Mickey Walker's fighting [illegible] to dawn on most of the [illegible] of the moment.

It [illegible] about that long for [illegible] of The Manly Art of Scrambling Ears to get all the [illegible] and then it doesn't [illegible] any good. This is one of the [illegible] of the [illegible].

I am [illegible] that it may be considered [illegible] [illegible] prowess [illegible] since he [illegible] to Pete Latzo of Scranton. [illegible]

HIS fight with Pete Latzo was one of the three times he [illegible] TEN-ROUND [illegible]

[illegible] Latzo in [illegible]

WALKER fought Mike McTigue, [illegible] Pete [illegible]

I want to see some of these other modern day champions go through battles like that before I'll be convinced that they are in Walker's class as a title holder. I want to see some of them move into a real contender's home town, without trying to dictate the officials, and defend their titles in TEN-ROUND bouts, to decision. [illegible]

N.E. to Send Balanced Team to Nationals

By STED CHANDLER

The track team which is to represent New England at the Nationals in Philadelphia July 2, 3 and 6 having been selected, the athletes will now get down to a session of real hard work under the supervision of Jack Ryder, Boston College and B. A. A. coach, who was chosen trainer.

Manager Tom Kanaly expects his charges to make a good showing inasmuch as the performances registered in the New Englands last Sunday were exceptionally good considering the conditions.

The competition, however, will be unusually severe, and just how many wares the New Englanders will be able to garner remains to be seen. In a meet which is run upon so large a scale at the Nationals it is extremely difficult to peer very far ahead. The field will be large and colored by the entries of many stars from foreign lands and faraway parts of America whose records are not well enough known to allow careless prophesy.

The best bets in the local outfit appear to be Lloyd Hahn in the mile, Ned Gourdin in the broad jump, and Tony Plansky in the all around events.

Track followers are interested in how Al Miller will fare. The company in the century, in which he is entered, will be as fast as has ever been seen. With Roland Locke in there the Crimson flash has little chance to win. In the intercollegiates running against a torrid field, Miller could not get better than a third.

Paul Harrington in the pole vault is another possibility. Fred Pease in the [illegible] is still another. The New Hampshire boy will take a lot of beating over the distance courses and he is to be seriously considered.

Ray Robertson and [illegible] Burns will represent New England in the [illegible] and Sam Martin, the Dartmouth boy who [illegible] the Intercollegiates and [illegible] the New Englands will [illegible] mark in the [illegible].

[illegible] Welch is slated for [illegible] and a half event with [illegible] competing in the walk. The New England champion [illegible] record Sunday is another possible winner. The remaining entrant is [illegible] who will compete in the discus throw.

This is a good team with great possibilities. The question is how well can it come through against the brand of opposition such as it will meet in Philadelphia. No athlete entered in the Sesquicentennial meet will find himself off on a pleasant [illegible].

Petrolle Knocks Out Schaeffer in Weird Battle

CHICAGO, June 22 (I.N.S.).—Boxing fans were still puzzling today over one of the queerest fights ever seen in these parts. It was the Billy Petrolle-Frankie Schaeffer affair last night at East Chicago. Petrolle, the "Fargo Express," won by a knockout in the first round.

After two minutes and ten seconds of fighting, Schaeffer dropped to one knee and remained in that position until the referee counted him out. He then arose and began punching at Petrolle, while the crowd booed lustily. The man with the dynamite name had all the best of the two minutes of fighting and the fans decided Schaeffer took the easiest way out.

Traded Players Wield Healthy War Clubs

THREE of the players involved in the recent Red Sox, Athletics Browns deal were in action yesterday, and two of them were much in the limelight. Only Howard Ehmke, twirling his first game against his old teammates, the Sox, met with tough luck, being batted from the box early in the game. Baby Doll Jacobson, playing his first game against the A's, by whom he was traded to the Sox in part payment for Ehmke, was instrumental in Howard's downfall, collecting four hits, two singles, a double and a homer.

Bing Miller, who went from Philadelphia to the St Louis Browns for Jacobson, wielded the biggest stick for the losing St. Louisians, pounding out a homer and two singles against Detroit.

FIRST!

By the Buyers' Verdict

Dodge Brothers' vehicles are commandingly in the lead, according to May registrations in Massachusetts.

In Metropolitan Boston this dominance is even more strongly emphasized.

No other single make of car (except the lowest priced) has ever been so sought after.

If this sales-record represented the appeal of mere price the total would not be particularly impressive. The important thing is that the car is not thought of in terms of price, but in terms of value.

Dodge Brothers' rapid climb to World Leadership was inevitable, because from the very beginning they were satisfied that as the value of their car revealed itself, appreciation, admiration and larger and larger volume would automatically follow.

Steadfast adherence to quality standards and the policy of constant improvement results today in —retention of all those basic features, such as dependability, long life, high resale value, low upkeep cost, and —in addition, a new attractiveness of color and line, a new snap and elasticity of performance, and a new ease and buoyancy of riding and handling that are a delightful surprise to those who formed their high opinion of Dodge Brothers' cars merely on their sturdier virtues.

It will pay you to visit us and examine the new types!

Time Trial Cuts Odds Against Harvard Crew

New London, Ct., June 21 (I.N.S.).—Odds on the Yale-Harvard boat race here on Thursday tightened perceptibly today as a result of reported times made by the two varsities in their last trials over the full four-mile distance. Yale, a prohibitive favorite until today, was said to have been timed in 19:47 and Harvard in 19:50, both rowing over the down-stream course.

Mike Murphy, ex-Washingtonian in charge of freshman rowing at Yale, still was at a loss today to say definitely what kind of a yearling crew he would have on Thursday, thanks to the disqualification of six freshmen for breaking the honor code in examinations. He admitted that Yale might have to default the race, in the event that some of the freshmen recalled proved unfit for racing after their layoff. After a physical examination by Dr. J. [illegible] Greenway tonight, Murphy will know definitely where he stands.

TEX INSISTS TUNNEY FIGHT CHAMPION

Rickard appeared before the board with W. F. Carey, vice-president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, armed with a telegram from Dempsey which gave Rickard sole authority to represent the champion.

Rickard served notice on the commission that his decision to promote the Dempsey-Tunney fight was his final word on the subject. He left the building immediately after the interview and a crowd which packed the ante-rooms and corridors stood by to await a closing statement by the commissioners, who have been divided for weeks, with Chairman Farley supporting Wills, Muldoon favoring Tunney and Brower's vote in doubt.

"I have nothing against a Dempsey-Wills fight," said Rickard, "but I cannot go back on Tunney. If I did, he certainly could prevent me from matching Dempsey with any one else. I told the commission that Wills already had signed a contract in Chicago and had received money down on it, and that there would be legal trouble if he was signed up now with Dempsey."

Asked if he would change his plans in the event that the commission refused to sanction the Dempsey-Tunney fight here Rickard said he would "stick with Tunney."

N.Y. Commission Turns Down Rickard's Proposal

New York, June 22 (I.N.S.).—The New York State Boxing Commission today rejected Tex Rickard's proposal to stage a heavyweight title bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney at the Yankee Stadium on September 16.

Commissioners George A. Brower and James A. Farley voted against Rickard's proposal and Muldoon voted for it.

COAST PROMOTER SEEKS FLOWERS-HUFFMAN BOUT

Los Angeles, June 22 (A.P.)—J. H. Crofton, Tijuana matchmaker, today started negotiations to sign Tiger Flowers, middleweight champion, as a substitute for Georges Carpentier, French heavyweight, to meet Eddie Huffman, Los Angeles, in a no-decision bout at Tijuana July 5.

Crofton also said he was negotiating with Young Stribling, who won a decision over Huffman [illegible] Summer. Carpentier was [illegible] to meet Huffman at Tijuana July [illegible] force [illegible] contract.

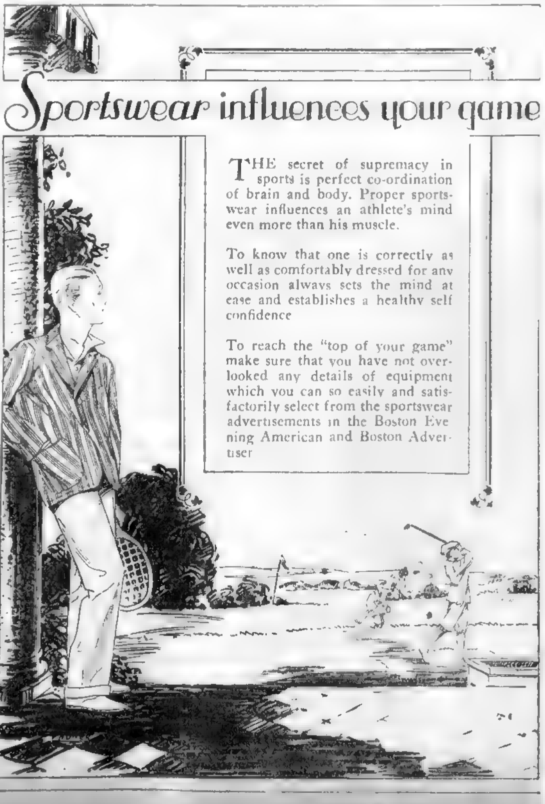
GENE TUNNEY GETS CHANCE

Tex Rickard, promoter, today told the New York State boxing commission that he had signed Tunney as Jack Dempsey's next opponent.



Sportswear influences your game

THE secret of supremacy in sports is perfect co-ordination of brain and body. Proper sportswear influences an athlete's mind even more than his muscle.

To know that one is correctly as well as comfortably dressed for any occasion always sets the mind at ease and establishes a healthy self confidence.

To reach the "top of your game" make sure that you have not overlooked any details of equipment which you can so easily and satisfactorily select from the sportswear advertisements in the Boston Evening American and Boston Advertiser.

Tom Henigan will run in the modified marathon at Providence, one of the features of the July 5 celebration.

Yale Field, New Haven, Conn., June 22.—Partly clearing weather prevailed when play began between Yale and Harvard in their annual baseball series today. Head Coach Joe Wood of Yale sprang a surprise in presenting his pony battery Wilbur Shoop and Al Foote while Coach Fred Mitchell started his first string twirler John Barbee of Chicago and Henry L. De Rham of New York. Schmidt was used at first base for Yale.

FIRST INNING

Harvard—Burns was thrown out by Caldwell who made a dazzling one hand stop. Jones walked on four straight balls. Zarakov also walked. Captain Lee Todd was heaved out by Caldwell. Tobin grounded to Smith. NO RUNS.

Yale—McClellan fouled to Tobin. Captain Lindley singled to right and stole second. Noble singled to left, Lindley scoring. Schmidt hit to short, the ball striking Noble, who was declared out, Schmidt getting a single. Caldwell breezed a single to center, Schmidt halting at second. Jones was [illegible] out by Sullivan. ONE RUN.

SECOND INNING

Harvard—[illegible] fanned. Ullman gave Caldwell an assist. Sullivan was passed. Barbee made Caldwell's fourth [illegible] in two innings. NO RUNS.

Yale—Vaughan flied to Burns. Foote reached second when Zarakov [illegible] his grounder. Shoop and McClellan struck out. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING

Harvard—Burns struck out. Jones walked and stole second. Zarakov sent sacrifice fly to Noble, Jones taking third. Todd walked and stole second. Tobin fouled to Jones. NO RUNS.

Yale—Lindley's fly was taken by R. Jones. Noble went out, Zarakov to Tobin. Schmidt went out, Sullivan to Tobin. NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING

Harvard—DeRham struck out. Ullman was thrown out by Caldwell. Sullivan singled to centre. Barbee was thrown out by Shoop. NO RUNS.

Yale—Caldwell flied to Zarakov. R. Jones was called out on strikes. Vaughn singled and stole second. Foote fouled to DeRham. NO RUNS.

YACHTS START BIG SEASON WEDNESDAY

The Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead will resume Wednesday matinee yacht racing tomorrow for the 1926 season. This season, the regatta committee has added two new classes to the race calendar.

Added to the classes of racing by the Corinthian committee are the "Q's" and "R's." The "Q's" by a vote of the association will not use the light sails for the Wednesday sailing races, while they will have a series of races from now until the middle of September for a special trophy presented by Mrs. Lawrence S. Percival which will be awarded the Q boat or 25 rater having the highest total of points.

Although the Q class will begin racing tomorrow the R class fleet will not get started until a week from tomorrow. For the R class racing another special trophy will be awarded.

With the Eastern Yacht Club Class R week races and those of mid-Summer or Marblehead week, the Q and R race series will not be held for the series cup. More than [illegible] these same yachts will contest in the mid-Summer week races, while the Class R week will be only for the 20 raters.

Many Favor Gorman to Beat Sharkey

By RINGSIDE.

BUD GORMAN, Kenosha, Wis., heavyweight, will arrive in Boston from New York early [illegible] Sharkey, New England heavyweight [illegible] the Suffolk A. A. at Braves Field [illegible] for backers in his tussle at the Wigwam. There were several [illegible] made today that Bud would come through with a victory over Sharkey just as he did when this pair clashed at the Arena last Fall.

Gorman is one of the smartest boxers in the heavyweight class. His skill and remarkable speed have enabled him to make most of the big fellows whom he has opposed look rather foolish.

Bud was not very well known to most Boston fans when he a[illegible] here last Fall to tackle Sharkey. Gorman had scored a couple of knockdowns against Young Stribling in a tussle at Detroit, but many of the fans were of the opinion the Westerner had merely got across lucky smashes.

Sharkey entered the ring a [illegible] over Gorman in view of his wins over Jim Maloney and King Solomon. The talent then received one of the biggest surprises of the year as Sharkey was outbox[ed] most of the way. He also [illegible] plenty of hefty punches around the head and body.

ALL efforts to re-match the men at the time failed. Gorman was [illegible] but Sharkey placed other engagements. The New England champion then went out and defeated Johnny Risko, Jim Maloney, [illegible] Huffman, King Solomon and Pat McCarthy. With the opposition [illegible], Sharkey was forced into a position where he was [illegible] obliged to sign to tackle Gorman again or else remain [illegible].

The bout means a great deal to Sharkey. He is considered the chief challenger of Harry Wills and Gene Tunney and in order to [illegible] this position he must score with a victory over Gorman.

There is unusual interest in the appearance of Knute Hansen of the Northwest who [illegible] with Joe Sessel of Brooklyn in an eight [illegible]. Hansen is managed by [illegible] Woodman who formerly piloted [illegible] Sam Langford.

Hansen is the latest [illegible] among the heavyweights. A veritable giant of stupendous strength with rare boxing ability and lightning speed, Hansen promises to [illegible] the heavyweight division.

Hansen is a big blonde as were his Viking ancestors and as fearless. Knute is 2[illegible] years old and stands 6 feet 3 inches and weighs about 2[illegible] pounds and is as fast as a cat and a real good puncher. Knute has a reach of 84½ inches and his chest is 42½ normal and 4[illegible] inches expanded.

NEWS of a new discovery among heavyweights travels probably faster than anything known. No less a person than Jack [illegible] heard of this boy and [illegible] to take him under his wing after he saw him box. However Hansen is in able hands and doesn't contemplate any changes. As a matter of fact he has his extraordinary developments.

[illegible] Anthony, Roslindale heavyweight, will make his [illegible] debut in [illegible] affair with Rocky Stone while King Solomon [illegible] Rojas in the ten-round semi-final.

ing how the clothing allotment can be spent to the best advantage, what percentage for hat, shoes and gloves, what percentage for underwear and hosiery, etc. The only way to plan the clothing budget is to look ahead for a year and map it out as best you can. This form is ruled for a three years' record and I [illegible] you'll enjoy keeping it and will find it valuable for later reference. Won't you send for yours today and for the regular budget form if you aren't already supplied?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. J. D. C. would like a budget $32.50 a week. Rent $16 including heat, gas and electricity; telephone $1.25 a month. Insurance $27.36 every six months; carfare $ weekly. Christmas club $2 a week. She says that this should really be called a budget for one as her husband gets his board free where he works and is only home on Sunday.

The standard budget for $32.50 gives you savings $4.50, shelter $7 including business carfares, food $10.50 including meals downtown, clothing $4.50, operating $4 and personal $3. As you have practically no operating costs unless telephone and possibly laundry, most of the $4 allotment under operating can be applied to savings or personal. I imagine you will have a balance under food, too, and will put this into savings.

Mrs. P. L. R. is much interested in Budgets. Husband's salary is $300 a month and $50 average commission. [illegible] two small boys and wee baby.

Your income averages $80.50 weekly. A standard budget would give you savings including insurance $8, shelter $16 including husband's business carfares, food $20 including all lunches downtown, operating $12 which usually includes heat, light, gas, telephone and laundry; clothing $12; and personal $12.

As your apartment is heated you will have about $1.50 extra under operating which usually would cover coal. This can be applied to savings or personal as preferred. Personal you show covers all the expenses not under the other five allotments.

Mrs. I. A. P. is anxious to try a budget. Has had a great deal of sickness in the family for the last eight years and has been unable to save. Income $40 weekly. Four in the family including a boy of eight and one of four. Her weekly expenses are rent $8, gas $1, electric [illegible], milk $1.80, groceries $[illegible] music lessons $1.50, Christmas club $2, part of which is used for payments on a [illegible] bill which is $[illegible] a year, $3 weekly payment on gas range, $17 insurance twice a year, church dues 35c a week. Saying this does not leave much for clothing or savings.

The beauty of a budget, you know, is that it will teach you the necessity of cutting your goods according to your cloth. If your present expenses [illegible] anything for savings or clothing, the only solution is to cut down expenses. This can easily be done under operating. If everyone in the family co-operates, I do believe you can get along with less gas than $4.30 a month which is your present figure, unless you are obliged to use gas for heating your hot water. A standard $40 budget allows $4 for savings, [illegible] also should cover business carfares, $12 for food including milk and husband's lunches downtown, $4 for clothing, $6 for operating which will cover gas, electricity and coal bill, and $6 for personal out of which comes the music lessons, payments on the gas range and church dues, etc. I think if you will start the envelope system and put these amounts away each week, you will be able to make both ends meet.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

REGISTERED UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

by Marie Queen of Roumania

MY TURKISH HOUSE

TODAY, as I write to you, I am in a strange little corner on the Black Sea—a funny little town on a bay overlooking gloriously blue water (for the Black Sea isn't black).

I came here once quite by chance on a long motor excursion with my son, Nicky. It is a place where artists meet.

There is one straggling street where Turkish merchants sell God-knows-what in tiny crooked shops. On the big, sunny, mosque-flanked square I met several painters. They clamored to show me about; I must see this and that and the next thing!

Nicky, as usual, was full of the spirit of adventure, so we left our motor and began to scramble about the picturesque, ramshackle Turkish quarter, penetrating into the strangest, tiniest, most lop-sided houses with crumbling balconies and curly-tiled roofs.

We were full of delight at our discoveries, and finally scrambling along the beach we came to a place which I felt I could no more part with. Right on the sea, old stone walls rising in terraces one above the other, almond trees and a huge old silver poplar leaning right over as though listening to the song of the sea!

Out of the way, unpractical, almost absurdly incongruous as it was, I MUST have this place! Never matter if it be considered "a Queen's folly," I must build a strange, artistic little Turkish house in this very spot and no other!

Well—I have built it, it is nearly ready—a real treasure of a house, pictorial, unusual, with its top story projecting Turkish wise, much further out than the lower part, old wooden balconies, a flat, uneven roof of curly, different-shaded old tiles, and a white minaret pointing to the sky!

All the almond trees are in full bloom, pink glory standing out against the blue, blue Black Sea, and my heart shouting for joy that the absurd, impractical little place is so entirely to my dream.

I hear the murmured words, "At your age" as friends point out that my house can only be reached on foot.

But I answer, "Yes, yes, at my age; for my heart is young and my feet are quite capable of making that path up, up, up the gray rocks to my little house, and my hands are building for those who come after me, and my eyes are loving beauty with all the passion they knew at twenty!

Let us never grow too old to love beauty, even if we can only reach it on foot, and have to toil a little to reach it at all!

And let me tell you this: The path leading to my house is two narrow paved walks running on both sides of a little canal of rushing water under a wide pergola of vines—a wistaria, honeysuckle and roses! Don't you see that it is veritably a dream come true?

And I am past fifty. . . . Dreams can always come true!

he was the only person around who seemed at all interested in the fact that I was a "worker." I used to bring my manuscripts to his house for reading [illegible] tion in general.

"I often wonder what these people think when they read your sketches," he chuckled, one night. "You put every word on paper exactly the way it's pronounced, don't you?"

"Oh, don't worry about that," I replied. "Most of the guys I write for can't read anyway."

We used to have long talks about our respective futures.

"Are you going to stay in this town all your life?" I asked, during one of these chats.

"No, siree, I'm going to New York city and be a lawyer," he announced.

"Maybe you'll be my lawyer some day," I suggested.

"You never can tell," he replied.

Fifteen years later, when he came to New York to practice law, I was the first client to walk into his office. He's been my counsellor and business adviser ever since. But to get back to North Brookfield and the Summer of 1895.

One of the songs I sent on to New York for publication, during our stay there, was a coon ditty entitled, "Hot Tamale Alley." May Irwin had put it in her show, and had popularized it to such an extent that by the time we got back to New York in August it was one of the hits of the town.

"May Irwin's singing a song of mine," I thought. "I wonder what these Witmark guys think now." If the Queen of England had kissed me, my chest couldn't have expanded any more.

On the way to the "April Fool" rehearsal I had a quiet laugh all to myself. I raved on, "I'll make this bird Williams understand that I'm no 'ham.' He'll forget anyone else ever played the part when I get a crack at it."

We were called for the first reading of the play the day we arrived in town. Mr. Williams read the dialogue and explained the bits of business and byplay and pointed out and went through the mechanics of each scene as carefully as he could.

When he had finished (it took several hours to read the thing) he turned to me and said: "Well, young man, that's a great part you've got. Don't you think so?"

The entire company, my family included, looked in my direction. Josie started coughing. She felt that something was coming. All during the reading of the play I had been shaking my head and telegraphing the fact that I was bored to death.

"I think it's the makings of a good part," I answered, "if you'll let me fix it up a little."

Josie coughed again. Father fumbled with his watch again. Mother started taking off and putting on her ring, a sure sign of nervousness on mother's part. The balance of the cast sat staring at me in amazement.

"Fix it up a little? What do you mean?" And Williams leaned on the table. He didn't quite "get me."

"Well, I mean I think I can help it a whole lot."

"Help the part, you mean?"

"Sure. Help the whole play if you'll let me fool around with the 'script for a day or two."

He pushed his chair away from the table and stood up.

"Say, who in hell do you think you are?" He blurted this, and then, turning quickly to the female members of the company, said, "Pardon me, ladies"; then to me again. "Are you trying to get a laugh, or are you just naturally fresh?"

"Well, there's nothing to get sore about, Mr. Williams." I knew I'd slipped. "I just want to be of whatever assistance I can. I'm perfectly willing to do the job for nothing."

"What job?" He all but shouted this.

I'd slipped again. I realized it, too, but I went on.

"Just to prove that it isn't a matter of money with me, if you'll postpone rehearsals for a few days and let me take a shot at that script I'll turn it into a regular play free of charge. That's fair enough, isn't it?"

Williams turned to Dad.

"Jerry, does this kid of yours think he's a comedian, or is a just a plain everyday crackpot?" This created a general laugh.

Dad tried to laugh it off, too. "Oh, Georgie's all right, Gus. He's just a boy with big ideas about himself, that's all." And then to me, "That's a wonderful part Mr. Williams has handed you, and if you're smart enough to listen and take advantage of his direction it'll be the chance of your life." Then to Williams, "It's a great chance for all of us, Gus, and we want you to know that we appreciate it too."

"I know, but what's the idea of this kid making a crack like that?" He refused to dismiss the thing.

"Will you do me a favor and forget it, Gus?" urged dad.

"All right, we'll let it go, but——" and Williams walked over to where I was standing and shook his cigar at my nose. "You save all your comedy and remarks for the sidewalk after this. I've never stood for a fresh kid in any of my companies yet, and I'm not going to begin now. Do you get that?"

"I didn't mean to be fresh, Mr. Williams."

"Well, you were, and see that it doesn't happen again. Is that settled?"

"Yes, sir."

And he clapped his hands and shouted, "Everybody back here at two-thirty for the first act." We were dismissed for lunch.

On the way to the boarding house dad went after me hammer and tongs.

"You've got to cut this stuff out. Do you understand? I'm just about losing all patience with you. Don't you realize that you insulted that man by belittling his play? What's getting into you anyway? Where do you suppose this thing is going to end?" A short pause—and he continued: "Haven't you any consideration whatever for your mother and sister and me? For the love of Heaven, come down to earth, please. If you don't something's going to happen, you mark my words."

Mother and Josie walked along without uttering a word.

"Well, I was only trying to help," I argued.

"Yes, you helped a lot, you did. Very nearly helped us out of a job."

"Listen, dad," I said. "Will you do me a favor? Will you answer me truthfully if I ask you something?"

"Of course I will."

"Well, on the square now, between you and me, don't you really think I could fix up that play if he'd let me take a crack at it?"

Josie heard this and answered: "Don't be silly, Georgie. The play's been a big success for two years already."

"I wouldn't care if it had been a success for twenty years. I still think it's a bum piece and I know I could fix it up."

"Georgie, please, please!" mother pleaded.

The Making of a Husband, Ann Lisle's Clever Serial

By Ann Lisle

"I [illegible] [illegible]e," I said with [illegible] to match my [illegible] home?" she inquired.

[illegible] but I fancy he will be shortly," I said indifferently.

"Right. I'll come in," was the answer as she drove the car a little farther down the driveway to make [illegible] waited to [illegible]

[illegible]

"You, Mrs. Harrison?" she asked with continuing terseness, as she shook a few drops of water out of the gray mane that was her hair.

"Yes. Will you come in, please," I said with a [illegible] that [illegible] to melt into cordiality.

"Surely will. And if you ask me to have a cup of tea, I won't say no," she grinned. "That was a pesky drive."

I laughed in spite of myself as I said.

"The kettle's boiling. We'll have tea in no time at all. But you are surely Diane Petruzzi, and so how do you come to use a word like 'pesky'?"

My visitor eyed me shrewdly as she entered the studio, which she [illegible] around with [illegible] approval.

"That's a long story. I may tell it to you over the tea cups," she said. "But if you know I'm Diane Petruzzi, evidently you know about that picture that sent me racing out here in a great rush and a great rage."

"I saw it this morning. My husband has gone out. I've an idea it's to protest——" I began, when she interrupted with a sharp whistle.

"Go get the tea. I like you," she ordered. "And when I'm warm inside I'll talk to you like a Dutch uncle or a sister or some such relative."

As I got the tea and arranged cookies on a little plate I put on toast to brown and opened a jar of jam. In ten minutes I had brought in the tea wagon with an appetizing little repast.

"Good work," said Diane Petruzzi. "I knew you couldn't be slack——"

"Slack," I repeated. "Southern now. You really must explain yourself to me, Mme. Petruzzi.

"I will," she said. "I like you—fine. Peters is the name. Dora Peters, of Athens, Ga."

I gasped and laughed, and then as she had three cups of tea and innumerable cookies, Mme. Petruzzi told me her story.

"I was born in Georgia," she said. "I loved singing and had a nice untrained contralto and learned all the spirituals and folksongs the negroes and the Crackers knew. And when I was about eighteen a rich Maine lumberman came down our way and married me before I knew we were engaged. He [illegible] to Maine. Never mind what his name was. I want to forget it—and him. Before five years had passed my hair was as gray as you see it now.

"He starved me for beauty and wouldn't let me sing unless he was drunk. Then he'd laugh at me. When I was twenty-five he died. My folks were gone—Georgia looked dingy and untidy to me. So I took the money he'd left me and went to Italy—to learn to sing."

"That's how you got the 'Petruzzi'—so they would give you a chance to sing," I exclaimed.

"They gave Dora Peters a chance," said my visitor. "But I could not sing."

Her tones grew dim.

"Was your voice gone?" I asked sympathetically.

SERVING THE FAMILY AND COMPANY LUNCHEON

GREETINGS, everybody!

The family luncheon is usually the outlet for last night's dinner left-overs, with maybe a contribution or two from breakfast thrown in for good measure. Fortunate the family if the mother can season these left-overs with imagination and turn them into something enticing. The attractive arrangement of the table is just as important in the noonday meal as for breakfast or dinner. They tell us that we eat with our eyes, you know.

Any informal type of table cover is correct for luncheon, runners, checked gingham cloths, Japanese crepe or even cretonne.

With soup as the first course, the spoon will be placed at the right of the knife. If there is a salad, the fork for it will be placed immediately at the left of the plate with the meat fork beyond it, following the rule of placing the last piece of silver to be used nearest the plate.

If pie or a layer cake happens to be the dessert, the extra fork may be placed just before the dessert is served or it can be laid on the table with the rest of the silver next to the plate and shifting the salad and meat fork further to the left. According to the strict table etiquette silver for the dessert course should not be placed on the table until the time for serving the dessert course, but this is an echo of the days when mothers had "hired help." Soup at the family luncheon may be served in soup plates. A formal luncheon calls for bouillon cups. The soup can be served piping hot before the family gathers. In Summer chilled melon, fruit cocktail or chilled consomme may replace the hot soup.

The wise mother trains her girls and boys early to help serve the family meals. This will save her many steps and is an excellent training for them.

Now for the company luncheon which is a favorite indoor sport with most women. If you are your own cook and bottlewasher, choose a menu as simple as possible that can be [illegible] tail, chicken pie, potatoes Julienne, hot rolls with currant jelly, hearts of lettuce with Thousand Island dressing, marshmallow layer cake, coffee and salted nuts is an ideal company luncheon. Or, if you would have it a little more pretentious, you can start with cream of mushroom soup or tomato bisque, creamed sweetbreads, potatoes surprise, asparagus with Hollandaise sauce, a crisp salad with hot rolls, a Bavarian or Spanish cream, salted nuts and coffee. Of course you will do all your marketing and prepare as much of your food as possible the day before the party. Spread your table with your handsomest cloth or runners and place doilies or centrepiece and doilies.

When the guests arrive, the first course is on the service plates—grapefruit, fruit cocktail, melon or bouillon. When they are ready for the next course rise quietly, remove the used plates but not the service plates and carry them to the kitchen. On your last trip, you will bring back the hot plates for the main course. It is well to ask one of the guests to serve as assistant hostess. Place her opposite you at the other end of the table. You can remove her service plate and place the hot plates in front of her. Next bring in the main dish for her to serve. Meanwhile, you are free to fill up the water glasses and take up each service plate as it is replaced by the hot plate. If there are vegetables to be passed, a two-compartment dish will save steps. After your guests are served, you are free to sit down. A plate or small basket of bread is passed around the table as needed—the same with jelly, nuts and relish. Never pile plates in removing them.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Absorbing Serial by the Author of 'The Bat' Full of Thrills

CHAPTER XXIV.

August 1st.

I AM now convinced that any attempt to solve these crimes by the discovery of an underlying motive is a mistake. Nor will Greenough's study of psychology help him here, unless he be expert in its psychopathic developments.

One cannot piece together into a rational whole the fragmentary impulses of a lunatic. . . .

An incendiary fire was started beneath the boat house last night, or rather toward morning. An assortment of what was apparently oil-soaked waste was placed in one of the pails from the sloop, and a candle lighted and placed in it. Over this was laid such lumber as was left from the repair of the pier.

Had Halliday been asleep the whole building might have burned. As it happened, he had been in the woods near where we found the boat, on a chance that its proprietor might pay it a visit. He discovered the fire from some distance and by hard running reached it in time to extinguish it.

He notified Greenough early this morning, but that gentleman was extremely noncommittal. He stood with his hands in his pockets, kicking over the ashes of the fire.

"What's the big idea, Mr. Halliday?" he inquired.

"I don't get that," said Halliday, belligerently.

"Don't you?" said Greenough, and after kicking the ashes once more, took an unruffled departure.

The best we can make of that is that the detective believes the whole thing a clumsy but concerted plan, on Halliday's part and mine, that we have endeavored to show that, although his watchers would be able to testify that I had not left the house last night, the unknown is still at work.

Nor can I entirely blame him for it. Whoever built the fire knew Halliday was out at the time. Halliday could not so state without betraying his knowledge of the boat, a matter he wishes to keep to himself as long as possible. Small wonder that the detective, estimating from its charred remains the amount of lumber heaped over the flame, was sceptical.

Detective Doubts

"You are a good sleeper, Mr. Halliday," he observed . . .

In spite of my best endeavors, some of my anxiety has crept into this record during the last month. It is not always anxiety for myself. Alone, I could take off my coat and fight this thing out, but I am handicapped by Edith and Jane.

Edith will not go and leave Halliday. Jane will not consider abandoning me here, although she has no idea of the true situation.

"If you want to go back to town," she says, "I'll go too, of course. But if you are talking about staying here alone, for some silly reason, I won't even consider it. You wouldn't have a clean shirt after the first week."

But, even if I felt that no action would be precipitated by the police, in case of such a move, I have a responsibility I cannot evade. The responsibility to my tenant.

I have, by a reduced rent and an alluring advertisement, brought here an elderly paralytic and his young secretary. And, evade the issue as I may, the fact remains that the last two acts of violence have been on my property. From the beginning, indeed, the most casual survey of the situation shows me that Twin Hollows has been a sort of focal point. It was on this property that Nylie saw the sheep-killer hunt sanctuary; not on it, but adjacent to it, is still hidden the boat, and it was from my own float that he first escaped from Carroway and later killed him; it was even very possibly his flashlight that Halliday saw, the night of his arrival when, finding the boathouse occupied, he worked his way through the salt marsh toward the sea.

More recently the radius of his activity has been narrowed to the property itself. The secretary sees him outside a window; he enters the house and attacks him from within. And a few days later, possibly having overseen Halliday's discovery of his boat, he attempts to drive him away by setting fire to the boathouse. . . . . .

Riggs' Mysteries

An investigation made just now has supplemented my memory. The photograph (Note: Plate I, "Eugenia Riggs and the Oakville Phenomena") shows a plastered wall, and one or two of the water colors on it. Possibly the spirit paintings of the [illegible].

It also shows that the cabinet, so called, was not a cabinet at all but a dark curtain on a heavy pole, which extends across a blank corner. In the picture these curtains are drawn back, showing a small stand on which are the stage properties of 'George,' a bell, a pan of something, a glass, and a small bunch of flowers. On the floor, ready for his ghostly hand, is a guitar. The wall is certainly plastered.

An inset shows the pan set on its edge to allow photography, and with the title: "Imprint of hand in putty. Dec. 2nd 1902. Notice lack of usual whorls and ridges." But in spite of this rather militant caption, I find I am unimpressed. Rather am I wondering whether somewhere in the back-ground there was not a Mr. Riggs, with a short broad thumb and a bent little finger who was not ignorant of the lack of the usual whorls and ridges in a pair of rubber gloves.

But it is no book for Mr. Bethel. Mrs. Riggs meets Markowitz on his own ground and fairly beats him. True, he produces a broad face and an arm which comes through the soiled stuff of the curtain. But she does that, and more; she shows under very dim red light—and any one who has tried to see by it knows how negligible that is—hands which may be touched and held.

"The hand," says one witness, "came out from the cabinet and advanced toward me. I could see nobody, but the billowing of the curtain indicated some unearthly presence behind it. I asked permission to touch it and the medium agreed provided I did it without force. I then took the hand and held it for a perceptible moment, when it seemed to dissolve away and slip from my grasp."

One may be sure it dissolved away! And that as speedily as possible.

But, considering that plastered wall, the entire evidence in the book, gathered together, forms a surprising whole. One must take off one's hat to the Riggs family, provided there were two of them, or to whomsoever assisted the lady. Especially since the windows were "shuttered and bolted, and small strings of bells, which would ring at the slightest touch, were hung across them."

One does not wonder, since Annie Cochran probably had access to the book, that she found her tea kettle moved about, and had her bed clothing shamelessly taken from her.

Beatrice Fairfax Tells Just How to Acquire Charm of Manner

Every Girl Has Charm

Popularity Doesn't Indicate Charm

Have Confidence in Yourself

The Right Man Will Appreciate It

By Beatrice Fairfax

EVERY so often, a sweet little letter reaches me with the sad refrain, "How can I acquire charm?" I doubt whether any woman ever lived who had not some degree of charm. For charm is not so much acquired from without as it is an inner beauty.

Usually, the girls who write me that they have no charm reveal charm in every line of their letters.

There are, however, certain qualities of inherent charm which we can develop to bring out our real individuality.

Don't you think considerable charm is revealed in the following letter, even in its signature? I do:

"Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a girl of eighteen and am considered fairly good looking. I try to be myself at all times and I also try to be charming. But I'm not charming—I feel certain of that. Perhaps you can tell me how to acquire charm.

"I meet loads of young men through my very attractive and popular chum. These young men escort me home then forget all about me.

"Please don't think for one minute that I am jealous. But I would like to be able to win a few young men friends.

"I am neither a flapper nor an old-fashioned girl. What is wrong with my personality? If you can solve my problem, I'll be most grateful to you.

"THANK YOU."

My dear, you have charm of your own, which is as natural to you as for the rose to be a rose. This you must not doubt.

Your friend is of a different, perhaps more vivacious type. Possibly she has more attention because men find her entertaining. But popularity is not by any means the only measure of charm.

Appreciate the friends you have and encourage them. Try to be especially sweet to those who, like yourself, may seem a little shy and quiet. [illegible] case by drawing them out and getting them to talking about themselves and their interests.

laughed as if food were a joke.

Forty five minutes later the round eyed waitress carried most of their order, untouched, back to the kitchen.

By that time Merry had found out that Tony was the only son of a widowed mother, that he was twenty-eight years old, and that he had deskroom in a law office in the Merchants Bank Building in State street.

And she had found out something else that was vastly more important to her, just then. She had found out that Anthony Gaines had fallen in love with her—and she had with him—at first sight.

"It's the only way," Tony said dryly. "If you don't care for a girl the minute you lay eyes on her, she's not the right girl for you! The minute I saw you coming down Boylston street a week ago today I said to myself—"

He broke off. "Let's get out of here!" he proposed suddenly. "I can't talk to you in this place."

Outside it was raining.

"My car is parked down on Charles street," Tony said, as they went along, with their heads down. "What do you say we knock off from work this afternoon? Let's go for a drive and get acquainted."

A Blissful Ride

"Let's!" laughed Merry, breathlessly.

There were curtains on the roadster, and it was dry and warm inside.

"Moms will murder me if she finds out that I skipped school," Merry sighed, as they drove along through Beacon street. "I'm learning to be a stenographer, but I doubt that I'll ever be a successful one."

"Marry me instead," said Tony, with his engaging grin.

Merry wondered if he meant what he said. Probably not, she thought. She sat silent in her corner of the seat watching him wistfully with her sea-green eyes.

"Funny thing, but I never thought of you as a stenographer," he remarked after a moment or two. "I never thought of you as having a family. I don't know why. Everybody has some sort of family, of course."

"How did you think of me?"

"Just as you—just as any girl," he answered. "I don't like to think of your being alive for twenty years, and knowing all sorts of people before I ever saw you."

"How silly!" said Merry.

She said it because she didn't think it was silly at all. She said it because she had been wishing the same thing ever since last night.

She had been wishing that she had met him when she was sixteen instead of Les Purcell. She had been wishing that she had never lived next door to Derrick Jones. She had been wishing that she had not gone on so many automobile rides and dances that had wound up in "petting parties" during the last four years.

"And yet," she thought gloomily, "almost every girl I know has done the same things that I've done. I'm no worse than the rest of them."

But the thought didn't make her any happier.

Wants Marry

She looked at Anthony Gaines. There was something about him that was so honest and straight-forward looking. Something about the quick open glance of his eye that showed him to be what men call "a square shooter."

"I wonder if he ever did or said anything in his life that he didn't mean," she thought, and then she remembered that he had just asked her to marry him.

"But he couldn't have meant it!" she told herself. "Why, he hardly knows me!"

They were soon in the country in Weston. Tony turned the car into a narrow lane and shut off his motor. He took out his watch and looked at it.

"Look here," he said, with his eyes on it. "It's now 2 o'clock. Let's go back to Boston and get a marriage license. We will have only five days to wait. What do you say?"

His eyes were on hers now. She saw that he was in dead earnest.

There was a pause while Merry Locke did the hardest thinking she had ever done in her careless, thoughtless life.

Then she laughed. "You must be crazy!" she answered lightly, "that's what I say!"

The man beside her jerked his head back an inch, as if she had struck him full in the face. A dark flush spread from his collar to the roots of his hair.

Without a word he backed his car out of the little lane. He headed it toward town.

"He's taking me home! This is the end of it," thought Merry in agony that was very real. "After today, probably I'll never see him again."

She began to cry without a sound. Presently she put up one finger to brush the slow difficult tears away. She didn't dare use her handkerchief. She was afraid that he would know she was crying, if she did.

But Anthony Gaines saw the little movement of her hands. He turned his head, and saw her tears.

In another minute the car stopped with a shrieking of brakes, and he had her in his arms. With her face buried in his neck, she began to sob, noisily, like a heart broken child.

Weeps and Tells

"You do like me after all, then?" he asked, as he might have spoken to a child.

Merry nodded, sat up, and looked at him.

"Yes, I do," she said. "But how long will it last?"

He frowned. "I don't understand you, Merry. What do you mean?"

She shrugged her shoulders. It was going to be hard to tell him what she meant.

But she finally did tell him, with her head turned away so that she did not have to look at him while she was speaking.

She began by asking him a question.

"Tony," she said, "weren't you ever crazy about a girl, before?"

"Why, sure," he answered promptly, "lots of times. But not like this."

"Well, so have I."

Merry spoke slowly. She had made up her mind to tell him the truth about herself as no one else on earth knew it.

"I've been crazy about a lot of fellows," she said. "Sometimes my love affairs didn't last very long—a month or two, perhaps. But while they did last they were—pretty intense."

He had been holding her hands, but now she felt his hold on them slacken. She drew them away.

"The men I knew always wanted to kiss me—and I always let them do it," she went on. "I guess I had quite a reputation at high school for being a petter. Some of the girls didn't like me—I could always get their men away from them."

She turned suddenly and looked at him. His face was as expressionless as stone.

"That boy who took us to the circus last night!" she finished breathlessly, "that's Derrick Jones. I've been playing around with him for a couple of years. Next year is his last one in college, and then he wants me to marry him. I don't know why I tell you all this—"

Tony Gaines shook his head. He went on looking at her for two or three minutes, as if he were trying to figure her out. As if there were some secret about her that her face would betray to him.

Then, at last, he spoke. "No, I don't know why you tell it to me, either," he said. "It certainly does not concern me."

A half hour later, he dropped her at her Arlington house and drove away without a word. Heartsick she watched the big blue roadster tear down the street and around the corner.

Cassie Is Angry

It was only half past two, and the house was filled with the drowsy peacefulness of mid-afternoon. The only sound in it was the low murmur of Helen's voice, as she sang at her ironing board in the kitchen.

Merry went upstairs on tiptoe, locked the door of her room, and threw herself across her bed. She dragged a pillow over her head to drown the sound of her sobbing.

"I wanted to be honest with him!" she cried, through set teeth. "I wanted to tell him the truth—I hate him! I hate him!"

She did not hate him at all.

The dreadful part of it was that she loved Tony Gaines and knew it. She knew also that that was why she had told him the truth about herself.

That night Cassie had a "date" to go to the theatre with Morley Kaufman.

Merry had never seen him, but she thought he must be very good looking and likable, because of the way Cassie made herself beautiful for him.

She spent two hours curling her hair, rouging and powdering her face, trying on pair after pair of earrings, and finally deciding not to wear earrings after all. It was eight o'clock before she was ready.

At ten o'clock she suddenly appeared in the doorway of the room where Merry and Jinny were getting undressed for bed.

"I thought you'd gone to the theatre!" Jinny and Merry exclaimed together.

Cassie shook her decorative head, and her green eyes glittered with anger.

"Morley didn't show up," she said, in a voice that shook with rage. She sounded as if she were getting ready for a good cry.

"He'll never get a chance to break a date with me again, I'll bet!" she snapped, and vanished into her room, locking the door behind her.

A half minute later the telephone bell in the downstairs hall gave its sharp ring. Instantly Cassie's door flew open, and she ran down the stairs.

"That's probably Morley now," Merry heard her say eagerly.

But a moment afterward [illegible] called up the stairs in a hopeless voice. "Someone for you, Merry."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Just as Merry is certain that Tony Gaines is never coming back he calls her on the phone. Is he angry because of her many love affairs, or does he forgive her? Don't miss tomorrow's American.

DAILY SHORT STORY

BETWEEN WOMEN

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

"NO! You shall not do that. Don't be a fool, girl. Come away with me!" Rene Darnay's strong hands gripped the girl by the shoulders and pulled her back out of the fog and murk that veiled the pier-head and the river below.

There was a little coffee-shop not far from where Rene found her. With her arm about the girl's shaking, thin shoulders, Rene took her there, led her to a quiet corner and soon was plying her with coffee, [illegible] questions.

The girl was as loath to answer as she was eager to eat. Perhaps it had been starvation as much as anything else that impelled her to take the final leap. Rene Darnay's keen honest [illegible] eyes regarded her with interest [illegible] in which there was no trace of scorn or of condescension. Rene had seen enough of the vivid East Side to feel no untoward sensations about a girl gone wrong. Besides, it was her business to look after fallen sisters. She was a social worker of sorts—rather too good-looking to be a bona fide uplifter.

"Feeling better, kid?" she asked brightly when the rescued one gave her a tiny smile over the sturdy coffee-mug with Pat [illegible] written on it in green. "Much nicer here than in the river—water's still a trifle chilly, the Spring has been so late. Now what's the striking idea of making a piece of drift wood of your pretty self?"

The girl was slow to answer. She was pretty, Rene decided. But her mouth drooped, her cheeks were thinly pale, her eyes [illegible] there was a [illegible] in her eyes.

"Man?" asked Rene.

The girl [illegible].

"Thought so. Couldn't be anything else. The devils are the cause of all our woes, sister mine. But between women now, are you not glad I pulled you back? You will be some day. Haven't you any backbone to fight your troubles? You know you are very selfish. You're not the only girl who has been left to live it down."

"But I am going to—"

"Of course you are. There is a place for just such happenings, and it is my business to show you where. Honestly, little girl, the whole business is much easier than you know; the path is a lot smoother than you dreamed; else you would never have craved to become fish-biscuit."

Ruth Mellen was the name she gave Rene. Ruth Mellen was what she wrote down at the hospice. And her baby bore the same name. Rene, however, was almost certain that she had another, probably a better one.

The Welfare people discovered that she was a good stenographer. They found her a place among decent men who laughed at hypocrisy and did not hesitate to employ a girl who had been in trouble.

Rene lost track of her then, but sometimes she came to the hospice before she took her child away. Rene saw her then and rejoiced in her happiness and success.

Rene Darnay was an unusual girl. An irresponsible little devil most people thought her, but Rene could be very serious when she wanted to be. Under her rapid-fire talk was a solid streak of common sense. Her people were rich, but she had neither father nor mother and preferred to cruise around as a social-worker rather than to stay at home and look pretty. And Rene got a lot out of life—a lot out of the squalid streets, the teaming, smelly tenements, the preying men and preyed-on women. Rene had lots to do and Ruth Mellen was to her merely one of many.

Rene discovered where her rescued friend was working when she walked into the offices of her uncle, Aldous Plante, a manufacturer of clothing. Ruth was secretary to him. She was in his sanctum when Rene entered. The two girls greeted each other warmly. Aldous Plante, though ignorant of Rene's connection with her, was aware that Ruth supported a child, and suspected that the versatile Rene had once had much to do with his efficient, serious young secretary.

"Well, Uncle Aldous, I have come with a grand secret to tell you. Even Ruth is not to be in on this secret for a long time—I'm going to be married!"

She repented of her haste when she saw the gleam of sorrow in Ruth's eyes. But Ruth smiled radiantly. Marriage—she had once dreamed of marriage. She had been promised it. A man had lied to her and told the cruellest falsehood that lips can frame. But she stilled the bitterness that rose in her, and stifled the envy. If only her child might have an honest name. She dreaded the day when an explanation would be due to the boy, when he would ask for his father and discover his mother's guilt. Guilt? Before God she knew she was not guilty as the man was guilty.

Ruth left her employer and his niece together. She was glad for Rene, proud of Rene's friendship, grateful to her for her act of reclamation. But for Rene, she would be dead and out of a life which had since proved to contain many joys she had overlooked, many solaces for pain even as great as hers. She would die for Rene.

Rene was leaving when Mr. Plante called Ruth back to him.

"Goodbye, uncle. Goodbye, Ruth. I'll bring David in to see you in a few days. And mind you don't lure him away from me, Ruth."

Ruth watched her with wistful, wondering eyes. Mr. Plante, rubbing his hands as business-men do to stir up trade, prepared to give out some letters.

"Rene is a lucky girl, Miss Mellen," he stopped to observe. "A very lucky girl. This young man she is to marry is coming into partnership with me. He will want a secretary too, but I'll see that he does not charm you away from me. You're invaluable. Now Rene's man. You may have heard of the Stettlers. They are a great family around Chicago. David is the son and heir. He is a fine chap."

Ruth Mellen was the cool composed stenographer when Rene presented her fiance the next Monday. But David Stettler, less master of himself, stammered and looked like a guilty school boy. Fortunately Rene was called to her uncle's desk and Ruth and David were left alone.

He whispered quickly to her:

"Helen, I thought you were dead. As God's my judge I did! I'll marry you now. I'll give her up. I owe it to you."

"I owe it to her. You pay your debt too late. I don't want you," said the woman, fighting down the thought of the child who did want him. "I don't need you. I am going back to the West."

"Between women, did you ever meet such a nice man as David?" asked Rene when they were alone.

"Never!" lied Ruth.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

IT'S a wise woman, who knows her own husband in his golf togs, these days!

One glance at any group of men on a country club piazza, would make a peacock scream with envy, a zebra shy and a California sunset hide its face.

For years, man has crushed back all his inner yearnings for self-adornment; but at last he has lifted the lid off his suppressed desires and is expressing his SOUL!

And, to judge by his sport clothes, his soul is a perfect aurora borealis. When it comes to color-combinations, woman isn't a patch on his golf-knickers!

It makes a woman positively dizzy to look at him. She doesn't know whether she's married to an escaped convict, a Totem pole, or a Navajo rug!

It is the war-cry of his revolt! For years, we have known that man was hiding something from us; but we never suspected that it was his love of beauty; nor that it would some day break out into such a rash of color!

* * *

But it has come! Women may have revolted morally, socially and politically. But man has revolted SARTORIALLY!

That's the way with a man! He never does things by halves. As long as he went in for mid-Victorian reserve and self-suppression, he dressed like an undertaker. Now that he has asserted his right to be part of the scenery, he is not going to be confined to any conventional limits of art or modesty.

* * *

He is going to be a WOW!

* * *

He has always known that he could be a Thing of Beauty, if he cared to or dared to. And now he is going to SHOW US!

Look at his rainbow hatband—and his yellow and violet blazer!

Look at his golf stockings that would make a clock hold up its hands!

Look at his passionate haberdashery!

LOOK—but don't try to stop him! For at least he is getting something out of his system that has been eating like wormwood into his heart!

It was sheer vanity that made him consider that any attempts at self-decoration were merely painting the lily. But this isn't vanity—THIS is real SELF-EXPRESSION!

And, anyhow, who cares what a man looks like, if it makes him happy?

Come out of the shadow and the background, oh Beautiful Male, an' let the women see just what a RIOT you might have been, if you had been "King in Babylon"!

* * *

Solomon in all his glory was a mere flicker beside you! Oh, you "Beamish Boy"!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

TOO many bondages men weave that fetter all their mirth, too much of loveliness they leave for sordid things of Earth. For he alone knows happiness whose heart is wholly free from envy's way of bitterness, from pride's fierce tyranny. Too many thoughts of worldly goals must mar the sense of peace, and so from these the wiser souls seek still to gain release. They give themselves to joyousness that dwells in simple things, they revel in the wind's caress, the bluebird's lifted wings. They share the freedom of the woods, the joy of plain and hill; at one with nature's changing moods their eager pulses thrill. Unbound by folly's vexing ties of worldly aim or mood, their ardent souls are free to rise and clasp life's highest good.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A GIRL'S club has just started a campaign for bigger and better evenings. They want more squatting in theatres and less sitting on front porches.

THEY'RE also trying to keep Saturday afternoon from being a total loss.

SOME fellows like to call on a girl and sit on the sofa all evening. The only way the women can put a stop to this is by soaking the men a cover charge.

OF course, a lot of men are so cheap that if you charged them a dollar to sit down, they'd stand up all night.

THE object of this girl's club is to do away with free evenings.

THEY want men with two pairs of trousers and money in both pairs.

ONE guy used to dip his currency in molasses to keep from passing it out too fast.

HE had a wooden leg and always nailed his money to it.

HE'S been through three earthquakes and never had a nickel shaken out of his wallet.

HE hangs on to his greenbacks by substituting Harry Lauder's picture for Benjamin Franklin's.

EVEN his dimes are equipped with stop-lights.

HIS pocketbook has nothing but one-way traffic.

HIS girl likes amusements but he wouldn't spend a quarter to see a horse race between Paul Revere and the Prince of Wales.

HE loves poetry but he won't read anything except free verse.

HE'S too cheap to buy gasoline. Whenever he goes riding on Sunday he always drives down hill.

HE'S the kind of a fellow that the girls are trying to forget.

ONE dame had to put tacks in all the chairs in order to keep her sweetheart out of the parlor.

IT'S all right for a man to be close, but the girls now-a-days don't want him close to them.

FOXY GRANDPA AND HIS INTERESTING DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

IT was a drizzly, rainy afternoon and Bobby was in one of those moods which little boys sometimes have when they don't know what to do. Elizabeth says she feels awfully sorry for little boys because they can't sew or cut out paper dolls or do any of the nice things which little girls do. And on this particular afternoon I agreed entirely with Elizabeth. Bobby couldn't even seem to find interest in a book, which is unusual in the little fellow, and Bunny seemed to be unhappy, too.

But just when things seemed particularly dull and dreary, we heard Scotty scratching at the front door. He gave his three short barks which is his way of telling us that he wants to come in.

Bobby ran to the door and opened it and in Scotty romped. He shook the dampness off of his coat and grinned and showed all his teeth. Then he wagged his tail until I thought he'd wag it off. He twisted and turned about until he was in the shape of a crescent.

"Well," I laughed, "the weather hasn't depressed you, Scotty." And Scotty gave a short bark as if he understood me.

"Wish I had a boy to play some games with," said Bobby in the most discouraged tone of voice.

"What game would you like to play?" I asked.

"Oh, anything," groaned Bobby in despair.

"What's the matter with playing a game with Scotty."

I knew by Bobby's expression that at first he didn't think much of this, but then his eyes brightened hopefully.

"What game could I play with Scotty?" asked Bobby, getting up from the chair.

"Let's try a new kind of blind-man's buff," I suggested.

"How can we play it with Scotty?" puzzled Bobby.

"Let's try," I laughed. "Bobby, you run and get a lump of sugar."

Bobby ran to the dining-room and came back quickly with a lump of sugar in his hand.

"Now," I declared, "Scotty will be the blind man. Come here, Scotty."

Scotty came obediently towards me and I took my handkerchief out of my pocket, while Bobby stood wide-eyed, wondering what this game was going to be.

I fastened the handkerchief around Scotty's eyes like a bandage and Scotty didn't mind a bit. He entered right into the game with as much interest as if he'd been a boy instead of a dog.

I took the lump of sugar in my hand, held it to Scotty's nose and let him sniff it. As soon as Scotty smelled the sugar, he sat up on his hind legs and barked. But he didn't try to pull the bandage off his eyes at all.

Then I rubbed the sugar against the leg of a table, and put it in a basket on the table.

"Find the sugar, Scotty," I shouted, and Scotty got into action.

He turned around two or three times and scampered around the room almost as fast as if he had not been blindfolded.

Then he started his search. First he smelled the sofa. Then he ran to the chair. He smelled the piano, next the fire-place, and then he went for the table.

"He's getting warm," cried Bobby, and Scotty barked.

Right up to the leg of the table he went and sniffed the spot where I had placed the sugar. Then he raised his head and sniffed the air. He paused a moment, got up on his hind legs, put his two front paws on the table and nosed the top of the table all over until he came to the basket.

"He's hot," exclaimed Bobby. And just as Bobby spoke these words, Scotty put his nose right into the basket, took the sugar in his mouth and with one crunch of his sharp teeth swallowed it. Then he ran around the room barking gleefully.

"That's the best game I ever played," said Bobby as we sat down to dinner.

THIS WOMAN'S BATTLE

Wins Against Ill Health

"At times I was hardly able to do my housework," writes Mrs. Margaret Wallace, of 1547 Safford Ave., Columbus, Ohio. How many women have found themselves in this same condition! How many women have fought bravely on, day after day, cooking, washing, ironing, doing the dishes, and keeping the house clean, when they were in a weakened condition and had not sufficient strength to perform these duties.

A friend advised her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a fair trial. "I just can't give enough thanks to it," she writes. "Now I can eat anything at all and I am feeling better than I have for years. I shall never be without your medicine again."

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling bugles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

Many other women tell us, as Mrs. Wallace did that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

PEOPLE FAIL TO COLLECT DIVIDENDS

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Even right here in Boston hundreds of people apparently forget all about their bank accounts. Others hold Liberty bonds on which no interest is being paid—I have heard that Liberty bonds were "legal tender" among bootleggers and hijackers and have actually been kept in circulation by them as "handy" on the high seas, etc.

I do not think you would, in spite of the preceding paragraph, expect people would leave dividends on stock unclaimed for years and years and perhaps especially because it would indeed be idle money, bringing no interest. Treasurer Robert W. Young of the American Glue Company states he holds dividends due on stocks in the company unclaimed for two years or more in the names of the following: Kingsbury Browne, Reginald Falck, Almenia Stanley, Lydia M. Storey, Frances B. Walker, Minnie G. B. Burton, Rhoda W. Simons, James H. Kennedy, John A. Bennett, Jr., trustee, under will of H. Sage.

What does your dollar buy today? Of course, its value differs, as compared with the pre-war value, according to the particular commodity you are buying. The average purchasing power of the dollar, however, as figured by various experts, is of general interest. The purchasing power of the dollar is now 61.5 cents, according to Eugene C. Holtman, chairman of Massachusetts Commission on Necessaries of Life.

One New England executive is establishing a pretty good record for consistency, I find. Governor Pothier of Rhode Island, for third time within past two weeks, refused to call special session of General Assembly to extend charter of defunct Southern New England Railroad for another year. Charter expires June 30 and unless extended road will be junked. Property is now in receivership.

like hens, should lay eggs, thus creating new organisms. Nature works along the same paths in big and little things.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND says, "The citizens are apathetic," indifferent to public questions, and they are.

He wants a civic campaign to do away with public apathy. That won't work.

If you want the public interested you must make politics and public questions INTERESTING.

THE OTHER DAY, in an American community above the average in intelligence, many citizens went to the polls to vote on a dog ordinance and returned without taking the trouble to vote, at the same primaries, for members of Congress.

Ninety per cent. of Americans, unless you arouse them with religious or racial antipathy, or with the high price of coal, feel that government is somebody else's business.

CONDITIONS ARE BETTER in Europe and will continue improving, if our European friends resist the temptation to go to war.

The pound sterling is very strong, France's trade balance is in her favor, Germany is making payments regularly under the Dawes plan and her industries are thriving.

If Uncle Sam will keep himself and his pocketbook out of that situation, it will improve steadily.

BUT THE REV. DR. A. J. PENNEY will be disappointed in his hope that "People now living will see universal peace." Soon, according to Dr. Penney, the only war will be between education and ignorance.

That is pious optimism, but as long as you have ignorance you will have war. You must remove the cause to get rid of the effect.

VERY IMPRESSIVE and picturesque is the religious demonstration at Chicago's Eucharistic Congress. Fifty thousand of the faithful kneeling in the street outside of the Holy Name Cathedral, 200,000 hearing mass at one time, many Cardinals, each on a separate throne—with the Cardinal Legate of the Pope ruling over all—a most impressive spectacle.

THE POPE'S LETTER of instruction to Cardinal Bonzano, urging him especially to bring all Christians back within the pale of the Roman Church, and the Cardinal's appeal to "The Lost Sheep of Rome" interests all Christians and others.

Whatever your own religion, you are bound to acknowledge that the Roman Church works ceaselessly, with energy and patience.

ARNOLD—In Brookline, June 19, Fred Atwell Arnold. Funeral services from his home, 87 Evans road, Tuesday, June 22, at 2 o'clock.

BAKER—In Melrose, June 19, Benjamin, beloved husband of the late Elizabeth J. Baker (nee Puddester). Funeral from his late home, 1040 Main St., Melrose, Tuesday, June 22, at 8:15 a. m. High mass of requiem at St. Mary's Church at 9. Relatives and friends invited.

BANKS—At the Newton Hospital, June 20, Jessie Laura, wife of Edwin W. Banks and daughter of Mrs. Isaac Kitson. Funeral services at the Church of the Advent, Brimmer St., Boston, on Tuesday, June 22, at 2 p. m. Relatives and friends are invited.

HAPGOOD LAUDS QUEBEC VIEWS ON LIQUOR

in what some call dragging the drink evil into the home and teaching it to women and children.

Next door, in Ontario, the farmers, being predominantly of British descent, behave more like ours! At the last referendum the cities went overwhelmingly for the system of government operation, but were beaten by a slight margin by the country districts.

NO WRITTEN CONSTITUTION.

From the early days of Maine, when American prohibition began with the farming districts dry and Portland, Bangor and Rockland dripping wet, that distinction has been prevalent with us.

There is, of course, one great difference here. There is no written constitution, to say nothing of writing mere legislation into a constitution, so that reasonable experiment becomes impossible. Four of the provinces are now experimenting, with variations of the Quebec system, and the chances are that Ontario will give up prohibition within a few years and accept some form of government operation.

The three Maritime Provinces are different. They are extremely conservative and not very wide-awake. Perhaps the hardest problem confronting the Dominion is the economic downfall of these three Provinces. In liquor study, as in other things, they are likely to lag behind the rest of the country.

BEARS ON GAMBLING.

A civilization cannot be studied in separate compartments. Everything affects everything else. The French attitude, which is working out in a way that is satisfactory, even to the English, as far as liquor is concerned, has its bearing on gambling also, and the relation of the police to vice in general.

There is a charge often made, that when the government went into the liquor business it created a new obstacle to cleaning up the tough district. I think that what has been happening shows exactly the opposite.

FLIER TO DROP TICKETS

Lieut. D. H. Davis

Tickets for the boxing Carnival of the Crosscup-Pishon Post, American Legion, will flutter from the sky when Lieut. Douglas H. Davis, reserve flying officer, soars over the city tomorrow noon. He will repeat the stunt each day until next Monday, when the carnival will be held at Braves Field in the evening.

Lieut. Davis flew from Langley Field, Newport News, Va., to Boston to aid the campaign for the carnival. He made the flight in eight and one-half hours flying time. He will fly at Revere Beach Sunday, also dropping tickets for the carnival. The tickets will be attached to samples of the Baby Ruth candy bar of the Curtiss Candy Company of Chicago, by which Lieutenant Davis is employed.

CROWDS FLOCK TO REVERE DESPITE COLD WEATHER

Despite the coolness of the weather of the past week, Revere Beach nevertheless, continued to draw heavily from the thousands who enjoy a day's outing at the seashore. Over the week-end and again last night great crowds strolled along the boulevard. The numerous outdoor amusements stretched along the more than one mile of crescent shaped waterfront proved enticing to the thousands of visitors.

He Beat Lincoln

And Might Have Beaten Napoleon

Seventy years ago, in a hotel room at Hannibal, Missouri, E. P. Bradstreet, a newspaper man of Cincinnati, played chess with Abraham Lincoln, and won. Mr. Bradstreet, now ninety-six years old, likes to remember that game.

After awhile, Lincoln, getting the worst of it, stopped. He had been debating with Douglas and his mind wasn't on chess. Perhaps that is one reason why he became the Lincoln of whom you have heard.

Mr. Bradstreet might also have beaten Napoleon Bonaparte at chess. You have only one brain, one body, one amount of physical and mental energy. What is used in one direction can't be used in another. If you use too much of your mind on chess, you won't have it to use on things more important. And chess unfits the mind for things more important. In chess you go straight ahead or sidewise with your castle, at right angles with your knight, the queen can do anything in a straight line, your king can only hop, your pawns are the unimportant proletariat, to be sacrificed when necessary.

In the real game of life, as played by Lincoln or Napoleon, it is necessary to cut across lots, make your own moves in your own way, as when Napoleon crowned himself in Paris or Lincoln issued his Emancipation Proclamation.

Training your mind to obey set rules does not train it to act independently.

Best Baseball Town

NOT Boston—But Not Far Away.

Ask a Boston boy to name the "best baseball town in the country" and he would be almost certain to designate his own, perhaps having in mind Boston's loyal support of baseball whether the team is "out in front" or "in the cellar."

New York fans, of course, would dispute the Boston claim. as would those of Chicago and Detroit.

And they would ALL be in error.

The honor of being the best baseball town in the country, according to supporters of the pastime in Worcester County, belongs to the village of East Douglas, where not long ago 4,000 persons PAID to see a contest in Schuster Park between East Douglas and Georgetown University.

The home team won, 16-1, but that is not ANY part of the story. The "punch" comes in the official figures of Douglas' population, which the books set down as 2,363.

Whenever you read that more than 1,772,254 Bostonians, 7,910,415 New Yorkers, 3,178,924 Chicagoans or 1,165,153 Detroiters have turned out at 6:15 P. M. for nine innings of baseball, Col. Walter E. Schuster and the town of Douglas will consider hauling down their flag and admitting that there IS one other community in America almost as keen for the national game.

Vacation Dangers

Not Confined to the Highways.

So much is being written and said about the menace of the drunken or incompetent motorist, and so much space is taken in the Monday morning newspapers by the week-end deathtoll of the highways, that it may be we are forgetting some other dangers of the vacation time.

From Skowhegan, as a sad reminder, comes the story of the two young men who started to change seats in a canoe, while crossing the lake from Lakewood in the town of Madison. ONE of the young men was drowned.

Lynn's report, of a near fatality on Sluice Pond, is even more reminiscent of the old time foolishness of rocking the boat, once a prank so appealing to the "practical joker" that the phrase found its way into common speech. In the Sluice Pond incident a young woman in one canoe offered her hand to a girl friend in another canoe, with the result that the first boat was overturned. The would-be hand-shaker was "rapidly failing when rescue came."

Don't rock the boat! Don't change places in a canoe! Watch your step, and if you do not know how to swim, take advantage of the opportunities which present themselves on every hand and DO IT NOW.

Wards Appeal for Help

Porto Rico came under Uncle Sam's wing by no act of its own, and is not comfortable.

Its 1,400,000 people are crowded 400 to the square mile; two-thirds of its grown-ups have no work, many are also anaemic or malarial.

Twice as big a percentage of its income is eaten up in taxes as taxes take in the continental United States, yet both its municipal and insular governments are overbonding and running behind. The poor can't pay and many of the rich find ways to dodge.

A group of its foremost citizens is asking Washington to look into this plight.

They want a commission of experts named to show how there can be better government at less expense.

They want another commission named to study how light industry can be set up to aid sagging agriculture, employ the natives and build up a better standard of living.

Then they want Uncle Sam to dive into his strong box and help them to refinance the island's public debts at longer maturities and lower interest; also to aid in the conquest of insular diseases.

Which sounds like a large order, but it would probably be cheaper than a receivership or a smashup.

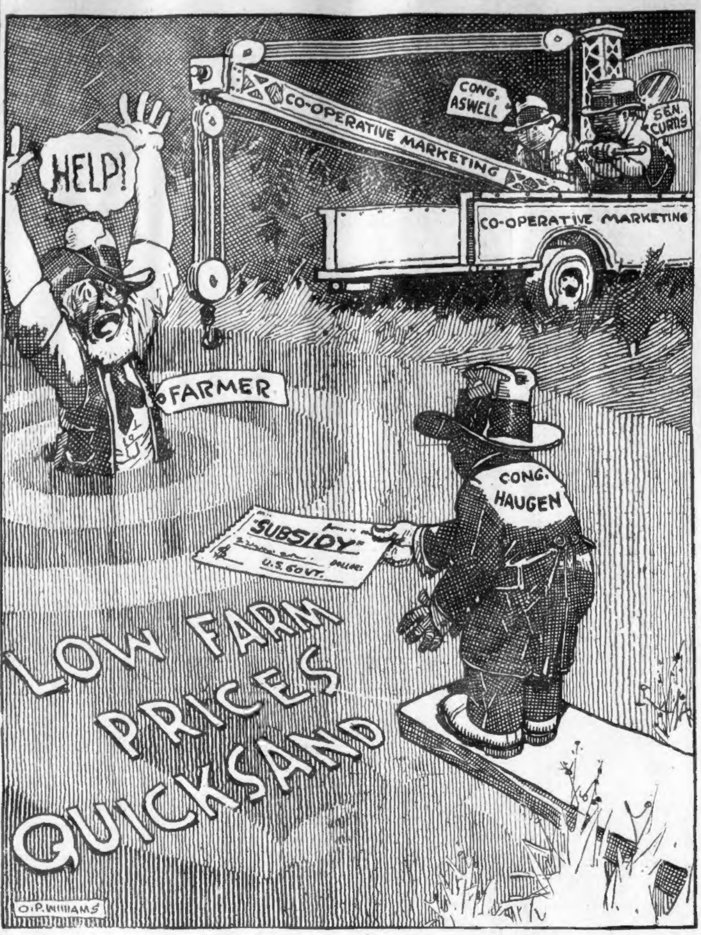
Which Will Help the Farmer?



BRING us and the farmer together, free us from supporting ten or fifteen million unnecessary food handlers, and our problem is solved. We can pay less than we pay now and the farmer can be paid more than he receives now.

This is the idea of the Curtis-Aswell bill, which President Coolidge is wisely supporting. The bill provides for a NATIONAL co-operative farm marketing organization to dispose of the farmer's crops, and it appropriates $10,000,000 of Government money to support the organization until it gets on its feet.

The farmer is carrying a millstone round his neck. The Curtis-Aswell bill removes it. The Haugen bill gives farmers a "shot in the arm" and tells them to stagger on.—From editorial in yesterday's Boston Evening American.

PROFITS TEST VALUE OF OUR LABOR

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IT is quite the custom to speak slightingly of profits. In the minds of most people the term profit seems to carry the implication of a low motive.

If a person is working to make money he is considered not to be the best kind of man. Often people will say that they do not do a certain thing for the pay that is in it; they just do it for the pleasure of rendering a service to people.

The point to be remembered is that while profit may not be the end and aim of labor and we may not work solely for the pay, at the same time profit is a test of the value of our labor. If nobody wants to pay us for the things we produce, then our labor is wasted. The fact that they are willing to pay us for our production proves the need of our labors.

Henry Ford makes automobiles and he makes them for profit. He makes profit because people want his automobiles. The profits in his case show that he is making something people want.

Doubtless there would be as much energy expended if people worked just to do good instead of for profit, but the trouble is that the world would be filled with a number of productions that nobody wanted.

The money we make is a test of how much our work is appreciated. That is all. Unless people are willing to pay you for what you do, as a rule what you do is not of much account. This is not an invariable truth, but it is one which holds true on the average.

Profits keep business in useful channels. Without profits business would tend to produce things that are not useful.

There is a good deal of bunkum about not working for money. It often means that what we do is of no value. People know what they want better than we know what is good for them.

HOW MENTAL ATTITUDE AFFECTS YOUR AGE

Some days you feel tired, worn out and discouraged.

You allow your imagination to picture early decay.

You think your condition means gradual decline.

The more you think of this the more sure you are that old age has set in, prematurely or otherwise.

Then your efforts begin to grow more unsatisfactory. You cannot concentrate on your work while you are seeing yourself with one foot in the grave.

There may be other causes that make you feel that you are nearing the end of your activity.

But you are no nearer the end than many another man who has years of usefulness ahead.

It is that you allow your thoughts to convince you of senile decay.

Don't compare yourself with others of your own age who go around looking listless and forlorn.

Perhaps they need not go to seed any more than you do.

Compare yourself with the bright-eyed, hopeful and active folks of your own age.

You are good for many years yet and you might as well enjoy them.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "TOUCHING HANDS"

A WOMAN who reaches
THIRTY-FIVE and has Never been BADLY HANDLED,
By ONE MAN
At least, is a PRETTY
FORTUNATE woman.
If women were to
Think of ALL THE HANDS
That had TOUCHED them
THROUGHOUT a lifetime,
Some of THEM MUST SHUDDER, some must WONDER, and perhaps
Some must WEEP
At the same time
EVERYWHERE there
Are WOMEN WHOSE SOUVENIRS are sweet, and Whose MINDS ARE FULL Of FRAGRANT MEMORIES.
When SOME MEN
TOUCH a woman
They ROB HER, but
When other men TOUCH
The WOMAN THEY LOVE
They GIVE HER everything
She WANTS. But
There are no RULES
The HAND that CARESSES
TODAY may WOUND tomorrow,
And the SAME HAND
That BRINGS SORROW to one
May BRING HEALING
To another.

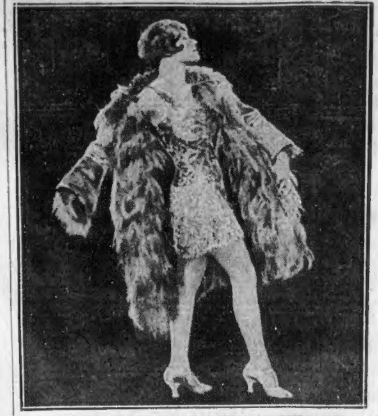
It May Come to This

But It Won't Last



THE COMING EVENING DRESS—SO THEY SAY

After you see this picture and read the line under it you may gasp and say, "Heaven help us." Yet it may be that this costume, more legs than dress, more motion that repose, may some day be a sight as common as that of a perfectly respectable modern grandmother with her dress up to her knees, and flesh-colored stockings below.

Millions see their grandmother dressed like that now, but wouldn't have thought it possible twenty years ago.

Who can say what fashion will do before it finishes its wild after-the-war debauch?

There is comfort in this. No matter how far the pendulum swings, it MUST COME BACK. Perhaps you like a little Quaker girl, with her dress up to her neck, her sleeves down to wrist, the tip of her little toe barely visible below her long gray silk dress.

We agree with you, we also prefer that Quaker girl to the energetic young person in this picture.

But don't worry, long sleeves, high neck and long skirts will come back.

Women's fashions swing back and forth like the pendulum of a clock. Eventually the right spot will be found, and there they will stay.

Everything that is permitted has its useful and good reasons.

Orphans for Servants?

Housewives in Paris can't find servants, at wages that they can afford, and ask permission to take orphans from the country and make servants of them. The authorities refuse, alleging that Paris is no place for an unwatched female orphan.

That is perhaps a wise decision, although Zola and other Frenchmen have shown that big cities are really better in morals than the country.

Charles Fourier, a really great Frenchman, in his reconstructed society would have had children eat first, and then wait upon their elders, "listening to improving conversation."

Perhaps he would change his plan if he heard some modern conversation.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ONCE again a devoted father and mother have discovered that Children Are The Most Ungrateful Things On Earth.

Ernest and Helen Hubbard were married twenty-five years ago. It was hard going at first. Ernest earned $90 a month and if Helen's folks hadn't helped her out with clothes and Sunday dinners the wolf would have howled pretty vigorously. The three children came within the first five years. Now Clarence is twenty-three, Eugene twenty-two and Rose and Ellen, the twins, are twenty. A lively bunch, all unmarried and rarin' to go.

Pa isn't earning $90 now. He earns exactly five times that amount, and the Hubbards have the prettiest house on Glenn street. They built it last year. Ma had a wonderful time when they were building it. She'd sit on a pile of lumber and watch the men, and she could hardly keep from singing out loud. Sometimes she'd cry a little to herself. It was wonderful, having a house like that after all the hard years. How happy they were all going to be in it. My, wouldn't the children be proud. Each one was going to have a separate room—even the twins. She'd let them choose their own wall paper and rugs and—on and on the happy dreams went. Every brick and lath that went into that new home was wrapped in fairy tales for Ma.

Evenings and Sundays she and Pa would come out and look things over. Ma thought it would be fine to make a family picnic out of those Sunday visits. But she could not get the children interested. They always had a lot of other dates.

"Never mind, Pa," Ma said, "after we get it finished nobody'll be able to pry them loose from here. Why, there won't be a nicer home in all the town for young folks. Do you think we'd better finish up the basement nice for a dancing room or leave it rough for billiards? Seems kind of funny to have a billiard room in our own house, doesn't it? Almost like a saloon——"

They finished it for dancing and Pa paid $50 extra to have pink cupids stenciled on the ceiling, although he thought it was all stuff and nonsense.

And then they moved in. There were whirlwind weeks of buying new furniture. Ma thought how excited Rose and Helen would be over that. Girls always loved to buy things. But they weren't excited. In fact, they were strangely apathetic.

"Aw, get anything you want, Ma, dear—it's your house," they'd laugh and dash off to a party.

The boys were just as bad.

"I don't care a hang how you paper my room," cried Gene. "What does a fellow know about wall paper? Besides I don't expect to see the old hole more'n one a month."

"For the luvva Mike—what's the big idea of going to all that trouble to fix up a dance hall down cellar?" snorted Clarence. "Who's going to dance without an orchestra? And there's no kick in dancing at home anyway!"

At first Ma wouldn't believe it. Surely, when everything was settled the children would be crazy about their new home. But presently everything was settled and still the children were crazy. It was a nice house and they were tickled that Ma and Pa had a nice house. But why did Ma and Pa want them to stick around? They weren't interested in Ma and Pa's house. They had plans for houses of their own.

If that cute little Kinney kid said "yes" to Clarence——

If Bill Edgar's sister took a shine to Eugene——

If the long anticipated Wonderful Boys materialized out of pink clouds for the twins——

Then you'd see some houses that WERE houses!

Not mansions, of course—probably little skimpy, furnished apartments, but OH — BABY—WHAT A KICK!

And in the meantime while they were waiting for their Real Dumps, Ma and Pa's house was just a place to flop!

But are they ungrateful, my dear—or are they simply normal young human animals? Why should they be over-interested in Ma's and Pa's house? Is the coyote cub interested in the old home burrow when the mating fever rises in his veins? Is the young bird interested in the old nest when his wings are feathered for flight and the sky awaits? Has Youth, whether it ran on two legs or four, or swam or squirmed on no legs at all, ever stuck around Ma and Pa's house?

No. And it never will.
